CHAIRPERSON GANNON: The House

Judiciary Committee will come to order. Today we are holding hearings concerning the Supreme Court's Suspension of Acts of the General Assembly. The intent of these hearings is to get a better understanding of the relationship of the General Assembly to the Supreme Court, and the Supreme Court to the General Assembly insofar as it relates to suspension of legislation passed by the House of Representatives, passed by the Senate of Pennsylvania, signed into law by the Governor, and in some viewpoints nullified by the meeting of the members of the Supreme Court without a case or a controversy being before it.

With those remarks, I would like to call the Honorable John M. Morganelli, District Attorney for Northampton County. Welcome, Mr. Morganelli.

MR. MORGANELLI: Mr. Chairman, thank you. It's a pleasure to be before your committee once again. I would like to take this opportunity, both personally and on behalf of the Pennsylvania District Attorneys Association, to thank the committee for this

1 opportunity to be heard on one of the most 2 important issues confronting us today; namely,
3 the power of the judiciary, and specifically
4 Article V, Section 10, of the Pennsylvania
5 Constitution which delegates to the Supreme 6 Court of Pennsylvania certain rule-making 7 powers.

8 In my view, the issue of judicial 9 power in a democratic society is one of the 10 most compelling issues of the time and one that 11 cannot be analyzed without some historical 12 perspective. In many ways, the American 13 judiciary is now the single most powerful force 14 shaping our society, our culture and our 15 morals. At all levels, the Supreme Court of 16 the United States, lower federal courts, and 17 our state courts, through judicial decisions, 18 are deciding hot-button questions that 19 basically are questions of policy and politics
20 that, quite frankly, are none of its business.

21 Political victories are being 22 achieved in the courts that could not be 23 achieved at the ballot box or in the 24 legislature. Over and over again judges are 25 inflating enumerated rights and creating new

1 rights that do not exist in the Constitution
2 which they enforce against democratic decisions 3 often arrived at at both the ballot box and in 4 the legislature. Court decisions are today
5 reported as victories for attitudes or 6 positions rather than as legal determinations, 7 and those decisions resonate throughout our 8 culture with powerful effects on public 9 attitudes.

10 In the area of criminal law, the 11 rights of criminals have been steadily expanded 12 and those of the community contracted. The 13 American judiciary continues to use the 14 Constitution and parts thereof such as rule 15 making to take basic decisions out of the hands 16 of the people.

17 The culture today and the law today
18 is a fiat of a majority of nine lawyers with 19 respect to the U.S. Supreme Court and seven 20 lawyers with respect to the Pennsylvania
21 Supreme Court and forced upon the citizens.
22 Contrary to the plan of American government, 23 the courts have usurped the powers of the 24 people and their elected representatives. We 25 are no longer free to make our own fundamental

1 and moral decisions because the courts oversee 2 all such matters when and as it chooses. A 3 crisis has occurred because the political 4 nation has no way of responding.

5 The founding fathers built into our 6 government a system of checks and balances,
7 carefully giving to the national legislature, 8 state legislatures and executives powers to 9 check each other so as to avoid either 10 executive or legislative tyranny.

11 The founders had no idea that a court
12 armed with a written Constitution and the power 13 of judicial review could become not only the 14 supreme legislature of the land, but a 15 legislature beyond the reach of the ballot box.

16 The court was thought as a minor 17 institution by the founding fathers and,
18 therefore, there were no provided safeguards
19 against its assumption of powers not 20 legitimately its own and its consistent abuse 21 of those powers. The executive legislative 22 branches have checks and balances, but neither 23 of them can stop the judiciary adventures in 24 making and enforcing policy.

25 A review of some of the language of

1 the Federalist Papers written by Alexander
2 Hamilton, Federalist Paper Number 78, gives us
3 an insight as to how the judiciary was viewed 4 at its inception. I'd like to read a few 5 quotes from that. This is from the Federalist 6 Papers. We proceed now to an examination of 7 the judiciary department of the proposed 8 government...whoever attentively considers the 9 different departments of power must perceive 10 that in a government in which they are 11 separated from each other, the judiciary, from 12 the nature of its functions, will always be the 13 least dangerous to the political rights of the 14 Constitution, because it will be least in a 15 capacity to ignore or injure them.

16 The executive not only dispenses the 17 honors, but holds the sword of the community.
18 The legislature not only commands the purse,
19 but prescribes the rules by which the duties 20 and rights of every citizen are to be 21 regulated. The judiciary, on the contrary, has 22 no influence over either the sword or the 23 purse; no direction either of the strength or 24 of the wealth of the society; and can take no 25 active resolution whatever. It may truly be

1           said to have neither force nor will, but merely 2           judgment; and must ultimately depend upon the 3           aid of the executive arm even for the efficacy
4           of its judgments.

5                         This simple view of the matter
6           suggests several important consequences. It 7           proves incontestably that the judiciary is 8           beyond comparison the weakest of the three 9           departments of power; that it can never attack 10          the success either of the other two.

11                        As can be seen from the above quoted
12          language of the Federalist Papers, the founding 13          fathers never contemplated a judiciary that 14          imposes its will over the people. The court's 15          impact on democracy has been horrendous.
16          Today, the court lines up against the majority 17          of the electorate over and over again citing 18          rule-making and other constitutional authority.

19                        We are here today advocating an 20          amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution 21          rule-making provisions under Article V because 22          it is the judiciary's assumption of power not 23          rightfully its own that has weakened and indeed 24          severely damaged the constitutional structure
25          of our government. It has been the judiciary

1 that has misled the public as to the role of 2 judges in a constitutional democracy.

3 Harsh criticisms by political leaders
4 of outrageous judicial decisions has not been 5 enough to restore the proper balance between 6 the branches of government. Changing the 7 behavior of the courts by way of appointments 8 have also failed. More serious efforts to 9 limit the power of the courts run into the 10 familiar refrain that our liberties are being 11 threatened.

12 Today, however, it is now clear that 13 it is the courts that threaten our liberty, the 14 liberty to govern ourselves more profoundly
15 than does any legislature. Any reform efforts 16 must contend with the sanctity that the 17 judiciary has attained not least through their 18 own rhetoric.

19 Article V, Section 10 of the 20 Pennsylvania Constitution provides, quote, the 21 Supreme Court shall have the power to prescribe 22 general rules governing practice, procedure and 23 the conduct of all courts, end of quote.
24 Despite the seemingly simple and direct 25 language of the Pennsylvania Constitution, our

1 court has cited this particular power to weaken
2 law enforcement's ability to protect victims,
3 witnesses and all of our citizens from crime.

4 The Pennsylvania Supreme Court more
5 and more is asserting authority over matters 6 historically left to the legislature in the 7 name of its state constitutional rule-making 8 power. The court has been less and less able 9 to exercise self-restraint, overruling or 10 modifying a broad spectrum of legislation,
11 including laws of evidence, capital punishment
12 proceedings, child videotaped closed circuit TV
13 testimony and the Commonwealth's right to a 14 jury trial to name a few.

15 Even the academic community has 16 commented on our Supreme Court's propensity to 17 wield its rule-making authority in Pennsylvania 18 as a powerful check on legislative action it 19 does not like.

20 The Supreme Court, under the guise of 21 rule-making, have successfully made their own
22 agenda the law of the Commonwealth of Penn-23 sylvania contrary to the wishes of our citizens 24 as expressed by you the legislature. Our 25 citizens were outraged by the lengthy delay

1           between the death penalty verdicts and carrying 2           out of the penalty.

3                       As their representatives you properly 4           enacted sound legislation to do something about 5           it. But our Supreme Court has said that there 6           is nothing you can do about it; there is 7           nothing the public can do about it because it
8           is their prerogative to declare and void
9           legislation under rule-making power.

10                      As you also know, after the court
11           struck down legislation allowing traumatized 12           child abuse victims to testify, you pursued the 13           only avenue available--constitutional 14           amendment. After legislative and public 15           approval, the courts of this state struck it 16           down because of the constitutional rule-making 17           clause. Once again, rule making was used as a 18           weapon against those who would protect victims 19           and fight crime.

20                      The Commonwealth right to a jury 21           trial and the evidence code are additional 22           examples of the court's usurpation of 23           traditionally legislative functions which 24           clearly undermines fundamental principles of 25           democracy. In many ways, the court is now an

1 obstacle to democracy. Once the court assumes 2 an area of law within its rule-making power,
3 the process of developing rules moves behind
4 the cloak of judicial secrecy, beyond the reach
5 of the other branches of government and beyond 6 the power of our citizens.

7 Indeed, an author who is himself a
8 criminal defense attorney and law professor has 9 strongly set forth that he believes the 10 rule-making power of our Supreme Court is 11 completely out of control, offends the 12 separation of powers doctrine and robs the 13 Pennsylvania legislature of its power and 14 ultimately thwarts the will of the people.

15 The federal system does not lend 16 itself to such problems, neither do the 17 rule-making systems of many states. These 18 jurisdictions recognize the danger of the 19 courts using rule making to become a super 20 legislature. Absent some kind of checks and 21 balances, the rules of court are expanded to 22 regulate more than technical, housekeeping 23 matters but to instead affect important social 24 policy questions.

25 There appears to be only one means at

1 the present time by which the Supreme Court can 2 be brought back to constitutional legitimacy.
3 That would be a constitutional amendment with 4 respect to Article V, Section 10 of the 5 Pennsylvania Constitution. This public
6 hearing, as well as the public hearings that 7 have taken place, are significant steps in the 8 right direction.

9 The prosecutors of this state have 10 unanimously endorsed the concept of adjusting
11 the ability of the Supreme Court to legislate 12 under the guise of rule making. Clearly, those 13 who benefit from the pronouncements of the 14 court will cry and suggest that such action 15 endangers the independence of the judiciary and 16 its freedom.

17 To the contrary, however, as has been 18 stated, it is the courts that are not merely 19 endangering our freedom, but actually depriving 20 us of particularly our most precious freedom, 21 the freedom to govern ourselves democratically
22 unless the constitution actually says
23 otherwise.

24 Lastly, it also clear to me that 25 amending the Constitution as suggested can only

1 be the first step by our citizens to reclaim 2 democracy. I can also assure you that it will 3 be met with resistance and with attempts to 4 void your actions. Therefore, the citizens of 5 our state will have to be informed also on a 6 case-by-case basis of the individual decisions 7 of individual justices.

8 It is my personal opinion that in 9 conjunction with amending the Constitution that 10 we also focus our efforts at the ballot box.
11 The next judicial retention election for 12 Supreme Court justice is 1999, and in my view 13 the public must be informed as to the 14 individual decisions of individual justices and 15 those justices who continuously attempt to 16 legislate and thwart the will of the people not 17 be retained. For the time being, however, 18 while that effort is begun, we ask for your 19 support in reining in the rule-making authority 20 of the court.

21 I'd like to thank you for your 22 consideration of my remarks. I'll be happy to 23 answer any questions that you might have.

24 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very
25 much. Representative Reber.

1           REPRESENTATIVE REBER: Thank you, Mr.
2 Chairman. Let me preface my question and/or 3 remarks by saying, I don't necessarily disagree 4 with many of the concerns that you have 5 expressed as a result of actions statewide the 6 court has passed but as somewhat of a follower
7 of constitutional history, I'm a little bit
8 interested because I didn't see it and maybe 9 someone else is going to get to it and you're 10 aware that some other presenter today is going 11 to in detail talk about this. Suggest that to 12 me and I'll certainly reserve that question.

13           My concern though is the language in 14 Section 10 that, and I know Senator Piccola,
15 who is here, has suggested in Senate Bill 1045
16 to remove vis-a-vis a constitutional amendment.
17 That is the language that is the last sentence
18 of Section 10 that all laws shall be suspended 19 to the extent that they're inconsistent with 20 rules prescribed under these provisions. I
21 really didn't notice any dissertation, analysis 22 or comparison or contrasting that language as 23 to how the court is moving outside its 24 constitutional purview when they do act in 25 light of that language being in Pennsylvania

1 Constitution as we know it.

2 I guess the reason I say that,
3 during the course of your testimony you were 4 citing Judge Bork and citing the Federalist 5 Papers. Of course, that all goes to the 6 federal Constitution. I'm really concerned
7 about, one, the Pennsylvania constitutional 8 history that brought about this particular 9 language, and if there's any history analysis 10 as to why that is there, because, with that 11 language in the Constitution, it certainly 12 provides a very firm linchpin, if you will, for 13 the justices to rely upon the type of 14 activities that in many cases I think are 15 overbroad in their actions.

16 I'm wondering if you have any back-
17 ground as to, under the current constitutional 18 section that we're talking about, why their 19 action with that language in there is not 20 allowable and justified. Is there any history 21 behind that as to the dynamics as to how far 22 they could go in doing what they're doing based 23 on that language?

24 MR. MORGANELLI: I think it's a good
25 question. I don't know whether any other

1 speakers will address it. Let me just tell you 2 what my thoughts are on that.

3 I believe that you are correct in 4 your analysis that the language that you quoted 5 with respect to the laws being able to be 6 suspended if any laws are inconsistent with the 7 rules and procedures of the court is exactly 8 what the court is doing; for example, with 9 respect to the recent suspension of the act
10 that was passed by you regarding the death
11 penalty appeals. My view is that the problem 12 is their interpretation of what constitutes 13 procedure.

14 What we're saying I believe is that,
15 if the legislature enacted a law, for example, 16 that said the lawyers who file briefs in the 17 Supreme Court only have to file one brief
18 rather than 25 briefs as the rules of the court
19 prescribe, I believe that that law properly 20 could be set aside under that section saying 21 that that law is inconsistent with their 22 ability to make procedural rules to govern 23 their court operations; how many briefs are to 24 be filed, briefing schedules; how long, for 25 example, courts can take to reach decisions in

1 matters before the Appellate Courts. There's 2 been recent amendments to the rule that now
3 judges have to act in a certain timeliness.

4 I believe if the legislature passed
5 any law with respect to that area, the Supreme 6 Court properly could avoid that rule under that 7 provision and say that is inconsistent with our 8 procedural rights as expressed in the 9 Constitution.

10 I think where the problem is, is the 11 court's expansion of the view as to what is the 12 procedural rules. What they are doing from our 13 perspective is, under the beginning language of 14 the rule, which was quoted, where it states 15 that Supreme Court shall have the power to 16 prescribe general rules governing practice,
17 procedure and the conduct of all courts, that 18 particular language is what the court is 19 relying on by saying that the death penalty 20 laws and the code of evidence, and all of the 21 other areas that they've struck down constitute 22 rules of procedure. That is where I think we 23 have a strong disagreement.

24 The way we look at the court
25 procedures are, rules and regulations that

1           prescribe the operations of the courts on a
2           daily basis, so I think that you are correct, 3           Representative, that the former language that 4           you read gives them the authority to do and 5           void legislation when that legislation is in 6           conflict with procedural rules internal to the 7           governing operations of the courts.

8                         But, I don't think that's what we're 9           talking about here today. What we're seeing is 10          the Supreme Court saying that everything is a 11          matter of procedure and that they have a right 12          to use the lateral language that you refer to 13          and void substantive legislation that goes to 14          issues that the citizens have a right to 15          decide; for example, how death penalty cases 16          are to proceed and those kind of things. I
17          think that the Supreme Court is overstepping 18          its bound; not necessarily on the language that 19          you quote, but on their expansion of this 20          procedure issue.

21                         REPRESENTATIVE REBER: I intend to 22          agree with that again. But, I still come back 23          to the language that appears in the current 24          Constitution, and it goes to substantive right.
25          Do you have a copy of Section 10?

1 MR. MORGANELLI: I don't have all of 2 it, but you can read it. I'm familiar with it.

3 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: If such rules
4 are consistent with the Constitution and 5 neither abridge, enlarge, nor modify the 6 substantive rights of any litigant, nor affect 7 the right, et cetera, et cetera. It goes on to 8 say, all laws shall be suspended to the extent
9 that they are inconsistent with rules
10 prescribed under these provisions.

11 So, it really gives them some lawful
12 room, if you will, on these kind of things. I 13 think it really comes down to what was the 14 intent when this particular section was 15 drafted. I'm not sure because I didn't look at 16 this, and I wish I would have had time to have 17 done so, whether it flowed out of the '68
18 Constitutional Convention or any of the three 19 prior.

20 MR. MORGANELLI: I think your 21 analysis is correct. I personally have not 22 looked at the historical background information
23 as to what created that particular language. I 24 think it would be helpful to do that.

25 I also think that the point that you

1 bring up is one of the reasons why we need to 2 have some kind of amendment here because, we 3 need to clarify. The court has taken general
4 language in my view, general procedural rules
5 and, of course, they'll be borne out by looking 6 at the history of it, and expanded that into 7 areas I think as I have said are really none of 8 its business and intrudes on the legislature.

9 I think that's the whole reason why
10 this esteemed body will have to be very careful 11 in terms of the language that, if this does 12 proceed to an amendment and into a ballot
13 question, as to exactly what kind of language
14 we are going to place it with, or whether it 15 will just be abolished. I think that's a 16 matter of your judgment and taking into 17 consideration those issues that you raised.

18 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: I think that 19 certainly is really the ultimate jugular issue
20 we have to work off of, backing down or doing 21 whatever we do to prepare this for the ballot 22 box.

23 Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I'm not 24 going to belabor. Maybe we might get into this 25 with someone else who has in fact maybe taken a

1 hard look at this particular aspect. I think 2 for, one, this is the jugular issue of the 3 committee to determine when we do craft
4 whatever language comes out of these particular 5 hearings and proceedings.

6 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
7 Representative Reber. Representative Chadwick.

8 REPRESENTATIVE CHADWICK: Thank you,
9 Mr. Chairman. Mr. Morganelli, I'm not going to 10 take a lot of time. Basically I agree with 11 everything in your statement, right down to the 12 commas and periods. I wanted to pass along an 13 anecdote to you because you have suggested a 14 need for a constitutional amendment.

15 Earlier this year Senator Piccola and 16 I--he's in the room here--attended a meeting
17 regarding the unified judicial system issue
18 with representatives of the Governor's office 19 and Justice Montemuro. At one point when we 20 were discussing the possibility of a
21 constitutional amendment, Justice Montemuro 22 stated rather glibly the court would not 23 hesitate to rule a constitutional amendment 24 unconstitutional.

25 Now, we're talking about constituting

1 an amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution,
2 passing two consecutive sessions by the General 3 Assembly, ratified by the people of 4 Pennsylvania. He stated -- Truly it was a very 5 glib statement that they would not hesitate to 6 rule a constitutional amendment
7 unconstitutional. Senator, am I correct in my 8 assessment?

9 SENATOR PICCOLA: Yes.

10 REPRESENTATIVE CHADWICK: I see the 11 Senator is nodding his head that he agrees with 12 what I thought I heard. I agree with you one 13 hundred percent that this court is out of 14 control. I'm just not sure how we're going to 15 get to the end of it.

16 MR. MORGANELLI: Let me say this. I
17 disagree with the justice. I don't think that 18 they would be able to state that the amendment 19 emanating from the citizens to amend the 20 Constitution can be declared unconstitutional.
21 I don't think that makes any sense at all.

22 I also think if that would be the 23 case, certainly impeachment proceedings would 24 be the next step. That would be showing a 25 judicial tyranny and now we would have no way

1 of controlling one of the branches of 2 government. I would be very surprised whether 3 the majority of the court would have that view
4 if they were really confronted with it. I 5 doubt it, but if they did, I think that would 6 have to be the next step.

7 REPRESENTATIVE CHADWICK: I'm having 8 a hard time finding anything to disagree with 9 you on. Thank you very much.

10 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
11 Representative Chadwick. Representative
12 Caltagirone.

13 REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: Thank
14 you, Mr. Chairman. Just a statement and then a 15 question. My background is early American 16 history and political science. I have been 17 doing some rereading of the Civil War era.
18 Some of the basic protections that we're all 19 afforded that we feel are very very sacred to 20 all of us in this room under our federal and 21 state Constitutions is something that we hold 22 near and dear to us.

23 We do have the proper checks and 24 balances within distinct and separate areas of 25 our government, both at the state and federal

1 level. Historically, there have been times
2 where the ebb and flow occurs both in the state
3 and at the national level over the relationship 4 of the three areas of government.

5 Something came to mind as you were 6 speaking. During the Lincoln administration, 7 which he probably innocently and correctly at 8 the time ignored some of the basic tenets and 9 usurped the powers of our national government 10 by ignoring and basically just putting aside 11 habeas corpus in which he was arresting 12 officials that did not agree with his 13 administration, both at the national and state 14 level and imprisoning them without benefit of 15 trial just as Tanney (phonetic), Supreme Court 16 Justice at the time, said that he was wrong and 17 he shouldn't be doing that. He even toyed with 18 the notion at the time of arresting and 19 imprisoning a chief justice--a little side 20 note.

21 The courts, they have been around 22 just as long as our government here, especially 23 in this Commonwealth. There are many, many 24 times that we disagree with their decisions and 25 not all of us are happy with those decisions,

1 and especially those of you who are attorneys 2 know only too well the impact that that can 3 have especially in a prosecutor's realm where 4 you implement the acts of our legislature.
5 Hopefully, we are doing the right things.

6 I just feel, even in recent history,
7 World War I and World War II things were done 8 in many of the areas concerning our security in 9 which rights of citizens were ignored or 10 overlooked basically for the total protection 11 of this country. In hindsight, when we look 12 back over those years, as history records, some 13 of those things weren't too nice that we did to 14 our fellow Americans.

15 I hold very dearly the tenets of 16 protections of our Constitution. I mean, we 17 live by written words and law. I understand 18 the concern that many of my fellow colleagues 19 have about the Supreme Court and where they 20 have been taking us as a state and as a 21 legislature. We object to their intrusions.
22 But, I also fear we may get a little bit 23 carried away with this and try to don the black 24 robes.

25 I'm asking you a question now, don't

1           you also feel that this is a very dangerous
2           measure that we are embarking upon that cooler 3           heads should prevail and it should be done very 4           cautiously and a lot of consideration should be 5           given when you are talking about amending the 6           Constitution and a possible battle with the 7           Supreme Court over whether or not they could or 8           could not rule that a constitutional amendment
9           could be valid? We're looking for a classic 10          donnybrook to develop here. What's your 11          thought on this?

12                       MR. MORGANELLI: I agree that the 13          legislature and citizens should move 14          cautiously. I feel that whenever we are 15          looking at amending the Constitution, which by 16          the way, I'll be honest with you. My personal 17          opinion is that, I don't like constitutional 18          amendments as a way of trying to turn around 19          court decisions that we don't agree with. But, 20          the problem in this case is not court 21          decisions.

22                       You made the point about the 23          legislature donning the black robes and 24          becoming judges. I think just the opposite is 25          occurring with the court. They're putting on

1 suits and ties and becoming a legislature, when 2 really there are no cases in front of them.

3 What I'm getting at here is that,
4 many times the courts rule against the 5 prosecutors and we reach decisions. We may not 6 like the ruling, but we certainly are not in a 7 position to imply that the judges are doing 8 something devious or beyond their power. They 9 interpret the law in a certain manner. I 10 really don't have a problem with that.

11 The reason I think that we need to 12 look at this rule making is because they are 13 taking general language, which I think really 14 was made for procedural internal operations of 15 the court and using that as a basis to 16 interfere with legislation when there's no case 17 in front of them. There's no case in front of 18 them when they just repealed the death penalty
19 statute and saying that this is just a 20 violation of their prerogative to set the way 21 they think the law should be.

22 I think there is a distinction
23 between that and where we read decisions where 24 there's two parties in a controversy and they 25 make a judgment or a ruling based on the law.

1 I think that's a little different than what 2 they are doing with the rule making.

3 I agree, Representative Caltagirone,
4 a hundred percent that this is something that 5 should not be done in a rush. I don't think it
6 should be done in a few weeks. I think it
7 needs to look at the history, as Representative 8 Reber has indicated, as to the historical 9 background as to when the language was adopted, 10 what was the intent of the framers. I'd like 11 to look at that. I believe you're going to 12 find that it was to be so the courts could 13 regulate their own and you wouldn't have a 14 legislature telling them what to do for their 15 own internal processes.

16 But I agree, sir. I think that we 17 need to act cautiously. That doesn't mean, 18 though, that we should be afraid to tamper with 19 this section because I think this section needs 20 to be tampered with in some manner. I will 21 leave to the wisdom of you who will have the 22 give and take of the legislative process where 23 I think this belongs to work out the mechanics 24 of the language or how it should be done. But, 25 I do think that it's needs to be attended to.

1           I think we are seeing over and over 2           again an agenda of a minority of the citizens,
3           the court, not even the whole court. There's a 4           consent on our court as their right to involve
5           itself in legislation. But I agree, and I 6           think you will proceed as you have done in 7           other issues in a cautious manner.

8           REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: I under-9           stand that we're looking at the rule-making 10          procedures. I know this is the gist of the 11          genesis of what we're dealing with here. I do 12          feel that -- and having worked with many of the 13          Senators and especially the former chairman of 14          this committee, now Senator Piccola, and, of 15          course, Chairman Gannon, that they are very 16          knowledgeable in areas of the law. They are 17          practicing attorneys. They know too well what 18          the rule-making powers of the court is. I 19          certainly wouldn't want them telling us how to 20          make our rules in the House or the Senate and 21          how we should run our bodies and what we do 22          when we adopt our rule-making capacities in 23          running our chambers.

24                 I'm just curious as to how they are 25          going to be reacting to us telling them about

1           what they can and can't do. I understand all 2           the implications of what's been said in 3           previous hearings. I'm looking forward to 4           hearing the rest of what's being said today.
5           But, I do think we have got to be extremely 6           cautious in attempting to amend and tamper with 7           areas of our State Constitution that has served 8           us well over 250 years.

9                   MR. MORGANELLI: I think that would 10           be the prudent way to proceed, in a cautious 11           manner, but I do think it needs to be 12           addressed.

13                   REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: Thank
14           you. Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

15                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
16           Representative Caltagirone. Representative
17           Clark.

18                   REPRESENTATIVE CLARK: Good morning.
19           I've conducted, as the Chairman of the 20           Subcommittee on Courts, two hearings on this 21           issue; one in Altoona and one in York. During 22           some of those discussions, which were probably 23           a little less formal than what they are today 24           as we sat around a table, we sort of came to 25           the conclusion that the legislature won't be

1           able to amend the Constitution; that the courts 2           will find a way to strike down any kind of 3           legislation that would go to that, or strike 4           down the question as it would appear on the 5           ballot given their propensity to do that. In 6           the past they've cited such precedent as the 7           Sheriff of Nottingham in England that we're 8           almost unable to effect this by an amendment to 9           the Constitution.

10                    So, let's give that as a fact for 11           now. Let's focus on your second solution to 12           this dilemma, and that is through the populous.
13           Along those lines we have talked about trying 14           to hold the justices of the Supreme Court and 15           all the Appellate Courts more accountable.

16                    Some suggestions along those lines, 17           one included a Boston Tea Party, which we 18           dismissed. Other ones included the length of 19           their terms, reducing that so that there would 20           be more opportunities for retention; there 21           would more opportunities to discuss the 22           decisions of each judge and how they voted.
23           There's discussions on term limits. There were 24           discussions on opening up the process of judges 25           so they could debate or discuss various court

1 decisions in the past and how they would agree
2 with those or disagree with those; generally,
3 try to educate the public through those types
4 of forums, and also part of the responsibility
5 of also following political parties to get out 6 the word when it comes to retention elections, 7 which, if we could reduce the term, it would be 8 more frequent. We might be able to have a 9 constant evolving year to year or every two 10 years discussion on our courts and what they're 11 deciding and how they are deciding. I'd like 12 to have you remark on that if you would.

13 I'd also like to add, my under-14 standing is the federal rules, procedures in 15 federal courts, they are adopted by the 16 justices and they're ultimately approved by 17 Congress. You might want to comment. I
18 appreciate it. Thank you.

19 MR. MORGANELLI: Let me say, first of 20 all, I did have an opportunity to watch briefly 21 some of the testimony that was done when 22 District Attorney Stanley Rebert testified in 23 one of your hearings on PCN. I noted there was 24 some discussion about whether or not this may 25 be a futile effort and the court may strike you

1 down. I really do have a problem with that 2 assumption as a fact. I think that appears to 3 be the only legal mechanism that the people, 4 that the citizens have to change the 5 Constitution.

6 The Constitution is the basic 7 document of our government. The Supreme Court 8 has a right to interpret what is constitutional 9 or what is not constitutional of that document.
10 But ultimately, the document is a result of the 11 rule of the people.

12 To say that the legislature cannot 13 put on a ballot an amendment to change this 14 Constitution and that the Supreme Court can 15 just say no, we're not going to allow the 16 people to amend its structure of government 17 because we know what's best, I think is 18 outrageous. I think it's an impeachable 19 position to take, and I don't believe that that 20 is accurate.

21 I know they have struck down attempts
22 to amend the Constitution on technicalities,
23 like having multiple questions on the ballot
24 rather than one question. Then we have to go 25 back to the drawing board and just put one

1 question on the ballot. That's my view.

2 That's the answer to that. If they find that 3 to be a violation, then we go back and we put 4 it on again and we make it one question. Now 5 we see what happens. But, I don't think they 6 can say you're not allowed to do this and we're 7 going to find some way.

8 I know your concern is, and I think 9 it's a legitimate concern, but I find that so 10 offensive to government and to the democracy we 11 live in that I just think it would be a most 12 outrageous thing for the court to do, and I 13 think it would lead to a real clash of the 14 branches of government.

15 The other suggestions that you've 16 raised, quite frankly, I have not had a chance 17 to give much thought to. If you ask and you 18 put me on the spot today and say are those good 19 ideas, I would probably be more cautious and 20 say, I'm not really ready to reduce the terms 21 of the justices or to expose them to the 22 political process anymore. It may aggravate 23 the condition rather than improve it.

24 I think the idea behind the retention
25 and the long terms was to move the judges out

1 of the politics and out of the pressure of 2 being forced to have the decisions on the whim 3 of the public in cases because there's 4 controversy between parties. I'm not certain 5 that that's necessarily bad or whether I would 6 want to tamper with that. I think I would need 7 to think about that in more detail.

8 What I'm concerned about is when they 9 just intrude; when there is no case in front of 10 them at all; no parties before them, and cite 11 this general rule-making authority to come in 12 and take over the legislative process because 13 they happen not to like the legislation. They 14 may not like the death penalty. They may not 15 like other things that this legislature does,
16 but if it's supported by the people, then I 17 don't understand -- unless it violates the 18 Constitution and no one has said that the Death
19 Penalty Act which was passed and now declared 20 invalid under rule making was unconstitutional.

21 They didn't say it was 22 unconstitutional in the normal sense that we 23 think of unconstitutionality, a violation of 24 the First Amendment or the Second Amendment.
25 It was unconstitutional because they said it

1 violated their rule-making authority. That is 2 the crux of the matter. We need to change that 3 part of the Constitution because I don't think 4 any of us agree that kind of substantive
5 changes or direction is really procedural as a 6 rule-making authority says.

7 The other areas I think need to be 8 debated and discussed in the public arena, I am 9 not prepared to endorse any of those ways yet 10 because I really haven't given much thought.
11 But my gut feeling is, I wouldn't want to 12 tamper too much with the isolation of the court 13 from the political process. It's bad enough to 14 have judge races every 10 years. I wouldn't 15 want to have them every two or four years. I 16 think it could create a difficult position for 17 judges who are in the middle of cases and now 18 they're running for election and they're being 19 asked questions about their views and they have 20 to decide these cases. I think it could cause 21 some problems.

22 Again, I understand we're searching
23 for solutions here.

24 REPRESENTATIVE CLARK: You indicated
25 that if we would try to amend the Constitution

1 and the Supreme Court to protect their own
2 interest would strike that down we were headed 3 for some constitutional crisis. I think before
4 we even get to that, I think we're headed for a 5 constitutional crisis on the unified court
6 system, court order which many of us are not 7 inclined to fund or follow. I think that will 8 come to the forefront long before any effort to 9 amend the Constitution to change the 10 rule-making powers.

11 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
12 Representative Clark. Mr. Morganelli, we thank 13 you for being here today and presenting us with 14 your testimony and insight into this very 15 important issue.

16 MR. MORGANELLI: Thank you for your 17 courtesies.

18 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Our next witness
19 is Senator Jeffrey Piccola and former Chair of 20 the House Judiciary Committee. Welcome,
21 Senator Piccola. We're glad to have you.

22 SENATOR PICCOLA: Mr. Chairman, and 23 members of the committee: It is indeed a 24 personal pleasure and a high honor and 25 privilege to appear before the committee. As

1           you know, I know firsthand of all the good work
2           you have done on so many issues. I'm 3           particularly pleased that Chairman Gannon and 4           Subcommittee Chairman Clark have seen fit to 5           schedule this series of hearings on the 6           Pennsylvania Supreme Court's rule-making
7           authority.

8                        Before I begin my prepared remarks, 9           Mr. Chairman, with your permission, as you may 10          recall back in March of 1995 when I had the 11          honor of sitting in the position you're in now 12          chairing the committee, we held a hearing on 13          court reform legislation, including legislation 14          dealing with the rule-making power of 15          constitutional amendment. With your permission
16          I'd like to make the transcript of that hearing 17          from March 2nd, 1995, a part of this record.

18                       CHAIRPERSON GANNON: That's fine. We 19          welcome that testimony.

20                       SENATOR PICCOLA: This could be a 21          somewhat dry and scholarly subject. However, 22          if it is not addressed, we may as well hand 23          over the keys of this Capitol building to the 24          judiciary, because, in this regard, as in some 25          other areas, Pennsylvania Supreme Court is out

1 of control.

2 The court's legitimate power in rule
3 making is embedded in our State Constitution,
4 specifically Article V, Section 1, where it 5 says that the judicial power of the 6 Commonwealth shall be vested in a unified 7 judicial system. Section 2, which states, the 8 Supreme Court shall be the highest court of the 9 Commonwealth and in this court shall repose the 10 supreme judicial power of the Commonwealth.

11 And finally, in Section 10(c) which 12 states that, the Supreme Court shall have the 13 power to prescribe general rules governing 14 practice, procedure, and the conduct of all 15 courts, justices of the peace and all officers 16 serving process or enforcing orders, judgments 17 or decrees. Later on it goes on to say, and 18 all laws shall be suspended to the extent that 19 they are inconsistent with rules prescribed 20 under these provisions.

21 There are at least four examples,
22 recent examples of the Supreme Court using the 23 cover of this authority to nullify or threaten 24 to nullify acts of the General Assembly. The 25 first took place near the end of the 1993-94

1 session when we were working on a code of 2 evidence. I'm sure that many of you on this 3 committee will remember the hard work of former 4 Chairman Caltagirone, his staff, my staff at 5 the time, many interested members of the 6 committee, as well as Senator Craig Lewis and 7 the Senate Judiciary Committee.

8 After working for almost two years
9 during an entire session, compiling a bill that 10 trial judges and litigants, both criminal and 11 civil, both plaintiff bar and defense bar, were 12 anxious to have enacted, the Pennsylvania
13 Supreme Court near the very end of the session 14 notified us that if we enacted it, they would 15 simply suspend it since it was in their view 16 procedural. They appointed a committee to 17 study this issue and to report back to us. As 18 you can see, no report has ever been made, and 19 so far as I'm aware no code of evidence has 20 ever been enacted or promulgated.

21 The second occurred last session when 22 we enacted a bill to allow for wages to be 23 garnished by landlords who suffered damages to 24 rental property at the hands of tenants.
25 Again, the court suspended that statute without

1 a case in controversy claiming that garnishment
2 is procedural.

3 At the end of the last session, we 4 passed a bill on medical malpractice reform.
5 Large portions of that bill were suspended for 6 the very same reason.

7 Finally, and most outrageously, the 8 court recently suspended a statute passed 9 during the special session on crime requiring 10 certain appeals in death penalty cases to be 11 consolidated. One of the biggest frustrations 12 in the criminal justice system is the fact that 13 in first-degree murder cases where the death 14 penalty is imposed, the appeals process takes 15 such a long period of time. One of the reasons 16 that it takes such a long period of time is 17 that at the state level the convicted
18 individual takes different issues up on appeal
19 separately; thereby, significantly lengthening
20 the process. The legislation in question 21 simply said that these state appeals would be 22 consolidated in one appeal. Again, our Supreme 23 Court said this is procedural and suspended the 24 statute.

25 Pennsylvania Appellate Courts, and

1 particularly the Pennsylvania Supreme Court,
2 are out of control. Simply by declaring 3 something procedural in whole or in part, they 4 have nullified and apparently will continue to 5 nullify, even without litigation in front of 6 them, acts of the General Assembly.

7           These judges and justices are men and 8 women elected for ten-yearlong terms in 9 elections where they are forbidden to speak out 10 about their views on the important issues they 11 might face. These justices are men and women 12 who stand only for retention after ten long 13 years in office. They then are in a position 14 to nullify acts of the General Assembly, whose 15 members, you and I, are elected every two and 16 four years in which the issues are hotly and 17 closely debated. These justices are men and 18 woman who deliberate behind closed doors and 19 who are virtually unaccountable to anyone while 20 they make or nullify the public policy of this 21 Commonwealth.

22           What should we do about this? When a 23 child is out of control you discipline it. The 24 court needs to be disciplined. There are two 25 ways to do that in our constitutional scheme.

1           The first is through the appropriations
2           process. We need to look very carefully at the 3           appropriations of the courts during the next 4           budget cycle.

5                     The second is the impeachment
6           process. I must speak carefully on this 7           subject since, as a member of the Senate, I 8           would have to sit in judgment on any article of 9           impeachment the House of Representatives might 10          send over. However, as a former member of the 11          House, intimately familiar with the impeachment 12          process, I would suggest that you look very 13          carefully at whether a judge or a justice of 14          the court in his or her court ruling violated 15          the Constitution by suspending any or all of 16          these statutes.

17                    At the very least, the debate should 18          take place in the House or in this committee on 19          that subject, and for that reason I am so very 20          glad that the Chairman has seen fit to conduct 21          these hearings. An impeachable offense is not 22          necessarily a criminal offense. It can be a 23          political offense such as severely and 24          intentionally violating the Constitution of 25          Pennsylvania by depriving a sister branch of 1 government of its constitutional prerogative to 2 enact public policy. The judiciary is supposed 3 to interpret and apply the law; not write new 4 law, and impeachment is a legitimate tool of 5 the legislative branch to ensure the court

6 adheres to its rightful function.

7 Finally, I would recommend to you a 8 constitutional amendment which was discussed in 9 some length earlier, and that is embedded 10 presently in Senate Bill 1045 which I
11 introduced in the Senate this session. This 12 would delete that section of the Constitution
13 giving the court the power to suspend statutes
14 and explicitly forbid them from doing so.

15 You must remember--this is in partial 16 response to Chairman Caltagirone's comment to 17 the earlier witness--we are not suggesting that 18 we are going to infringe upon the court's power 19 to declare a statute unconstitutional in a case 20 that's properly brought before them in 21 litigation. That must remain part of our 22 constitutional framework.

23 Our Appellate Courts are out of 24 control, and it is our duty as the legislative 25 branch of government to rein them in. Thank

1           you for allowing me to testify. I'll be happy 2           to answer any questions that the members of the 3           committee might have.

4                       CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
5           Senator Piccola. Representative Caltagirone.

6                       REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: I didn't 7           have a chance to tell you publicly, but I read 8           in the clips you are now a 33rd Degree Mason 9           and congratulations on your accomplishment.

10                      SENATOR PICCOLA: Thank you.

11                      CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Representative
12           Manderino.

13                      REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Thank you,
14           Mr. Chairman. Welcome, Senator Piccola. I'm 15           setting myself up here because I know your 16           astute debate skills, and how anything I will 17           say will make me sound like a fool, but I'm 18           going to risk it anyway.

19                      SENATOR PICCOLA: I don't think you
20           ever sound like a fool, Representative.

21                      REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: I guess 22           just as a matter of record, and because we 23           disagreed on it when it was going through the 24           process, I just want to put a counterspin on at 25           least your analysis of what the Unitary Review

1 Bill did and that it was simply making one 2 appeal. I think it was doing a lot more than 3 that.

4 In particular, with regard to the 5 article of the Constitution that we keep 6 referring to that gives the court the ability 7 to prescribe general rules governing the 8 practice and procedure and the conduct of the 9 courts, far be it for me to say I told you so.

10 As I'm looking through the transcript
11 of the special session and the amendments that 12 at least I offered during that special session, 13 I thought my amendments were addressing 14 specifically those court procedures, practices
15 and conduct when it dealt with the time frame 16 for review of the record, and also the 17 requirement that the Commonwealth must file an 18 answer to a petition before we go to hearing.

19 I'm not suggesting that that's the 20 reason that the court struck it down. I'm just 21 suggesting that there was a lot of meat and 22 substance in there that gives room to the 23 question to arise as to whether or not had we 24 had a time frame of a little bit longer on 25 review of the courts so that it would deliver

1 review of -- I'm sorry, of the appellate 2 counsel or requirement that not only does the 3 petitioner have to file a petition, but the 4 Commonwealth has to answer before we go to 5 hearing. Those to me seemed clearly
6 procedural. I'm sure you are going to tell me 7 why they weren't.

8 My only point is, there was a lot of 9 stuff in that bill. It wasn't as simple as I
10 think, at least so far today, we've led folks 11 to believe. I personally thought there were 12 procedural practice time frame issues immersed 13 in that bill that could have been corrected 14 without having infringed upon the idea of 15 unitary review. I know you want to respond.

16 SENATOR PICCOLA: To respond, and 17 I'll respond generally because I don't have 18 specific recollection of your amendments. To 19 respond specifically to that statute as well as 20 the code of evidence issue, you have to look I 21 think at the words in the Constitution.

22 I happen to be a strict
23 constructionist. I think that's why I get 24 upset with the court broadly applying what they 25 perceive to be their rule-making function.

1 Yes, they have a rule-making function under the 2 Constitution and they should have such a rule-
3 making function. But, all the Constitution
4 says about suspending statutes is that, laws 5 shall be suspended to the extent that they are 6 inconsistent with rules prescribed under these 7 provisions.

8 If the court had had a rule that was 9 explicitly inconsistent with a statute, or the 10 statute was explicitly inconsistent or repealed 11 a rule of the court, then I think the court has 12 a right under this section to step in and say; 13 for example, if we said the answer must be 14 filed within 10 days and the court's rule is 20 15 days, we amended it to say 10, I think the 16 court has the power to say that part of that 17 statute is not applicable. Our rule of 20 days 18 is applicable.

19 But, the court has taken that and has 20 grabbed statutes in their entirety that maybe 21 touch on a procedure; for example, the code of 22 evidence, they --

23 REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: You never 24 presented anything to them on the code of 25 evidence.

1                   SENATOR PICCOLA: I understand that.
2                   They told us in no uncertain terms that they 3                   were going to suspend the entire statute. They 4                   suspend statutes where there are no rules
5                   explicitly inconsistent. They just say, well, 6                   this is in the area of procedure. We may or 7                   may not decide to enact a procedure and,
8                   therefore, we're going to suspend that statute.
9                   What is procedure and what is not procedure, as 10                  you are well aware, is a very gray area or can 11                  be a very gray area.

12                  The court has taken this provision 13                  where the legislature might attempt to step in 14                  and shorten a filing deadline or do something 15                  that is clearly procedural that the court has 16                  already spoken on in its rules and said no, the 17                  court may do that. That's what this section of 18                  the Constitution means in my estimation. The 19                  court has grabbed a vast body of jurisdiction 20                  that I don't think they are entitled to have.
21                  That's where I think we get into our 22                  differences of opinion because the court has 23                  broadly construed this section of the 24                  Constitution and has, unfortunately, applied it 25                  too broadly.

1                   REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Thank you.

2                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
3                   Representative Manderino. Representative
4                   Petrarca.

5                   REPRESENTATIVE PETRARCA: Thank you,
6                   Chairman. Senator, I didn't have the 7                   opportunity to serve on this committee when you 8                   were in the House. I think we crossed briefly.
9                   A quick question or two.

10                   This phenomenon, if you will, with 11                   the Supreme Court, is this something in your 12                   opinion that is happening very recent, or does 13                   this go back a number of years or decades?
14                   What is the timetable regarding what's 15                   happening?

16                   SENATOR PICCOLA: This has been in 17                   the Constitution at least since 1968 and there 18                   may have been a similar provision prior to 19                   that. I haven't researched it that far back.
20                   If you go through Purdon's, you'll see statutes 21                   occasionally suspended for a variety of reasons 22                   or a section suspended because it was rule 23                   making.

24                   REPRESENTATIVE PETRARCA: Has the 25                   Supreme Court been overstepping its bounds

1 since that time or is this recent?

2 SENATOR PICCOLA: My analysis has 3 been, in the last maybe ten years, and that's 4 an arbitrary number. It might have gone back a 5 little longer or might not have been quite that 6 long. Say the last decade or so, the Supreme 7 Court has increasingly stepped into this area 8 in a fashion much more broadly than they should 9 be stepping.

10 I think the proof of that is in the 11 pudding. The fact that the Chairman is having 12 these hearings is evidence that the court has 13 obviously tread upon significant areas in which 14 many members of the General Assembly feel we 15 have a legitimate interest in legislating, and 16 the court has stepped in and nullified
17 statutes.

18 It's a very serious thing, and we 19 could criticize the media for jealousy 20 regarding our powers. I think it's a very 21 serious thing when elected representatives of 22 the people who are elected every two and four 23 years are -- have their statutes, the acts that 24 they enact into law, overturned by a court. It 25 is appropriate that that happen if that statute

1 is in violation of one of the sections of the 2 Constitution dealing with fundamental rights,
3 Bill of Rights, habeas corpus, what have you.
4 That's entirely appropriate.

5           However, we're not talking about 6 that. We're talking about the court just 7 coming in, without even having a case in 8 controversy, regarding what it perceives as its 9 powers, and the effect of that is to overturn 10 statutes, many times on substantive law, that 11 the legislature has seen fit to act on.

12           We can debate back and forth,
13 Representative Manderino and I don't agree on 14 the unitary appeals issue, but my side
15 prevailed on that. The elected majority
16 prevailed. It's a very dangerous area when you 17 allow the courts to get into this area and 18 don't check them. They are increasingly 19 getting into this area. The fact of this 20 hearing I think is evidence that that trend has 21 increased dramatically in recent years.

22           REPRESENTATIVE PETRARCA: This is 23 obviously much more than a disagreement with 24 the Supreme Court's holdings in a few cases 25 where there are decisions?

1                   SENATOR PICCOLA: Absolutely. We're 2 always going to disagree with court rulings.
3 That's history as long as the republic. There 4 are going to be people that agree and people 5 who don't agree.

6                   If there's a constitutional principle
7 involved, then clearly the court has a
8 responsibility to step in and make a decision 9 that either a statute is or is not 10 constitutional. Nobody is suggesting, nobody 11 is suggesting that we interfere with that 12 power. This has to do with the court 13 nullifying acts of the legislature because they 14 assert that it's procedural. It may or may not 15 be actually in conflict with an actual rule 16 that's in place. They're just saying this 17 whole area is procedural, so that's for us to 18 decide and to make rules about.

19                   REPRESENTATIVE PETRARCA: I think we 20 got close with this with Senate Bill 806 we had 21 in the House not too long ago dealing with 22 search and seizure rights of our citizens and 23 how that was interpreted by some people to be 24 an issue on the forefront because of some 25 disagreements with the Supreme Court holdings

1 in that area of law. Thank you.

2 SENATOR PICCOLA: I'm not familiar
3 with that specifically, but if it had to do
4 with search and seizure and we enacted it and a 5 defendant or someone who feels their rights
6 were violated, took that case to court claiming 7 what we did was unconstitutional, there is 8 absolutely -- I have no problem whatsoever with 9 the Supreme Court sitting and deciding whether 10 what the legislature did was in violation of a 11 section of the Constitution dealing with search 12 and seizure. That is the role of the Supreme 13 Court, but that's not what they're doing here.

14 REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Mr.
15 Chairman.

16 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
17 Representative Petrarca. Mr. Andring. I'm 18 sorry. Representative Manderino.

19 REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Thank you,
20 Mr. Chairman. One other question, Senator 21 Piccola. I realize that Senate Bill 1045 is 22 not in our committee, but it was distributed to 23 us as part of today's packet. In thinking 24 about what you've said, and then upon 25 reflection reading the actual proposed change

1 to the Constitution in this bill, I'm not 2 getting it.

3 What I heard you say was that the 4 Supreme Court should be able to, for example, 5 using the med-mal bill as an example or using 6 the Unitary Review bill as an example. They 7 shouldn't have struck down the whole Unitary
8 Review bill in its entirety within procedure, 9 but if they thought there were components of 10 that bill that dealt specifically with their 11 procedure, then they should have pointed out 12 those particular components and suspended only 13 those, the narrow construction view.

14 But, when I read the language
15 proposed here, meaning deleting the wiggle room 16 that said all laws shall be suspended to the 17 extent that they are inconsistent, and then 18 your argument is that they take extent too far, 19 it appears the language goes maybe all the way
20 in the other direction. The Supreme Court
21 shall not have the power to suspend statutes
22 which are inconsistent with the general rules.

23 Is there not some kind of in-between 24 that tightens the current language, but 25 basically doesn't say -- I read the new

1           proposal as saying hands off. You don't have a 2           say about anything about what's in the statute.

3                    SENATOR PICCOLA: You're absolutely
4           right.

5                    REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: That is 6           what it says?

7                    SENATOR PICCOLA: That's what it
8           says.

9                    REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: That's 10          different from what --

11                   SENATOR PICCOLA: Well, no. It's 12          different than what I believe -- We wouldn't be 13          here today, I don't think, if the court 14          properly excised the power that it has under 15          the Constitution presently. I think we're here 16          today because the court has overstepped its 17          constitutional bounds.

18                    What I was responding to is what I
19          think the court under the present Constitution 20          can legitimately do, and that is, pick and 21          choose an item. For example, I cited 10 days 22          versus 20 days.

23                    REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: What 24          you're suggesting is that, you don't even -- 25          you're not comfortable that even if they were

1           doing that, that's not really want you want to 2           see.

3                        SENATOR PICCOLA:   If Senate Bill 1045
4           were enacted, that's correct.  However, that is 5           only one of my suggestions.  There's a couple 6           of other ways of approaching this.  Obviously,
7           this is probably the most Draconian, and I
8           would admit to that.  There are other ways.

9                        In fact, the court -- To show you the 10          arrogance of the court, the court has on its 11          rules right now a provision for the creation of 12          a judicial council.  One of the roles of the 13          judicial council under the rules as they 14          presently exist is that the judicial council, 15          which would include legislative members, would 16          be an advisory body to the court in the 17          rule-making process.  Up until just very 18          recently, within the last month or less, the 19          court never, with I think one brief exception 20          in many many years, implemented the judicial 21          council.

22                       One way of involving people other 23          than the court in the rule-making function is 24          to, and I have suggested this as well, as 25          another amendment to the Constitution or

1 different amendment to the Constitution, is to 2 create a more meaningful judicial council; one
3 that is not totally independent of the court, 4 but involves more legislative involvement; more
5 citizen involvement; more members of the bar 6 involvement; other judges' involvement, so that 7 they would actually do the promulgating of the 8 rules subject to the final approval of the 9 court itself.

10 I believe if you had a more broad-11 based involvement in the rule making of the 12 judiciary, you would have less -- it would be 13 less likely that the legislature would be 14 trying to intrude in the legitimate area where 15 the court tries to make rules. That's another 16 way of approaching the same subject, which I 17 don't necessarily oppose.

18 1045 is the most direct and straight-19 forward example. I think it makes for the 20 subject of good debate. I would be willing to 21 consider others, but right now -- I would even 22 be willing to consider the court itself making 23 itself available to the legislature in the 24 rule-making power. That's another way of 25 approaching it.

1                   In other words, Congress and the 2                   Supreme Court of United States have a 3                   procedure, and I'm not totally familiar with 4                   it, but Congress is intimately involved in the 5                   federal rule-making process. It doesn't seem 6                   to do much damage to our federal system to have 7                   Congress involved in that process. Maybe we 8                   should look toward doing that. I think Senator 9                   Greenleaf has a bill to involve the legislature 10                  in the court's rule-making function.

11                  Admittedly, and we found this with 12                  the code of evidence, many times the procedure 13                  and substantive law are intermingled. I'm not 14                  going to suggest that they're not. Perhaps, 15                  the process of rule making should also be 16                  intermingled with the legislature and the 17                  judicial branch. Right now the judicial branch 18                  in my estimation under the limited powers I 19                  think they have, I think they've overstepped 20                  it.

21                  REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Thank you.
22                  Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

23                  CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
24                  Representative Manderino. Mr. Andring.

25                  MR. ANDRING: Senator, this hearing

1 is limited or directed to the Supreme Court's 2 suspension of the acts of General Assembly and 3 the legislation which has been circulated as a
4 response to that issue. I would consider a
5 fairly narrow identification of a problem and a 6 fairly narrow and limited response. Yet, 7 throughout the hearing we've heard terms like 8 an Appellate Court system or a Supreme Court 9 out of control. You mentioned a possibility of 10 impeachment.

11 My question goes actually to the 12 scope of the problem that you wish to address.
13 Is the problem limited to the Supreme Court's 14 suspension of the acts of the General Assembly, 15 or are, in fact, what we're dealing with a 16 broader array of problems in the Appellate 17 Court system that at some point are going to 18 need to be addressed by the legislature?

19 I guess a follow-up to that would be,
20 if there are additional problems, is this type 21 of a piecemeal approach preferable, or does 22 there come a point where the legislature has to 23 bite the bullet and deal with an ongoing series
24 of problems with the Appellate Court system?

25 SENATOR PICCOLA: I happen to think

1           there are a number of problems that we have 2           with our Appellate Courts. Rule making is one
3           of them. I think if that issue were to be 4           addressed, that would be the key to bringing 5           some order to the Appellate Courts, although I 6           think there are a number of others that need to 7           be addressed.

8                       I think the court-funding issue that 9           was brought up during the testimony of Mr.
10          Morganelli I think is an absolutely critical 11          issue and Representative Clark alluded to that.
12          I think the issue of how we select our 13          Appellate Court judges, I have a view on that.
14          I know some members of this committee disagree
15          with that in terms of the election process. I 16          just think that contributes to the court's lack 17          of accountability. We think elections are 18          accountable, make people accountable, but I 19          don't think they do with respect to judges for 20          a whole variety of reasons. We can go into 21          merit selection if you want to.

22                      I think there are a number of flaws 23          in our judicial system that need to be 24          corrected. I will refer you specifically to 25          the record of the hearing we had in March of 1           1995 that I ask the Chairman to make part of 2           this record, because it identifies a whole 3           package of bills we considered at that time,

4           all of which I think are still relevant.

5                   MR. ANDRING: Thank you.

6                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you, Mr.
7           Andring. Senator Piccola, I'm probably the 8           most ignorant person on this panel with this 9           issue, although I have a sense of how I feel 10          about it. I want to ask you a question or two 11          and it may sound foolish, but it's because I 12          don't know the answer.

13                   When the court goes through this 14          process of making these rules that suspend 15          statutes either in their entirety or partially, 16          are these promulgated in a public forum? At 17          what point in time would we, as part of the 18          public or part of the General Assembly, become 19          aware this is occurring other than in private 20          communication as you suggested in the evidence?

21                   For example, the suspension of the 22          Malpractice Reform Act, what point did we find 23          out or were we aware they were suspending, and 24          was that process done publicly or not?

25                   SENATOR PICCOLA: The process is not

1 public at all. The process as it is done in 2 all court deliberations is private. The court
3 probably doesn't even have any hearing on it.
4 I'm not aware of any hearing that was 5 conducted.

6 Again, I'm probably not the best one
7 to answer this. But it's my understanding that 8 the court simply issues an order, per curiam, 9 and that is probably published in the court
10 reports and, perhaps, even in the Pennsylvania 11 Bulletin. I'm not sure about that. That would 12 be how we would get notice of it.

13 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: That helps. I'm 14 looking at the language in the Constitution, it 15 says, all laws shall be suspended to the extent
16 that they are inconsistent with rules
17 prescribed under these provisions. I'm trying 18 to get a fair reading of that. I see all laws 19 shall be suspended. I'm wondering whether 20 that's telling the court that you have to 21 suspend any rules, any laws that are 22 inconsistent; or, could it be interpreted to 23 mean if someone brings to your attention that 24 there's a law that may be inconsistent with a 25 rule prescribed--I look at prescribed as a rule

1 already in existence--

2 SENATOR PICCOLA: Exactly.

3 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: -- then a court
4 would determine whether, in fact, that was the 5 case.

6 I don't see anything in here that 7 says, you guys just get together and look at 8 the statute and decide whether or not you think 9 it interferes with a rule that's in existence 10 or a new rule that you want to promulgate. My 11 impression of what happened to the death
12 sentence appeal statute was that, the court 13 promulgated new rules and said the statute was 14 inconsistent with the new rules they were 15 promulgating. That's how I read what occurred 16 there. That's how I became aware of what 17 happened.

18 I'm wondering if, perhaps, it would 19 allay some of our concerns if, number 1, when 20 the court was considering a statute was going 21 to be suspended that that be done in a public 22 forum; that they hold hearings on it. They 23 have public debate just as we do in the House
24 or you do in the Senate. Let's see what each 25 justice feels on that particular thing. This

1 is not a case or a controversy, so I don't 2 believe in my opinion it falls within the 3 prescribed area of not discussing cases that 4 are before the court.

5 Then if they did that, perhaps, we 6 would have a better understanding of where they 7 are coming from on this rather than just having 8 this order laid on our desk saying, by the way
9 fellows, that law you passed is null and void.
10 I wanted your comment on perhaps -- Maybe that 11 will even bring us to the point where we are 12 now with these hearings.

13 SENATOR PICCOLA: You're absolutely
14 right. It would be preferable if we had some 15 sense as to why the court -- especially if the 16 court is going to get into nullifying statutes,
17 why they're doing it. All they say is rule
18 making. Rule making, that's all they say.

19 The difficulty with that is, the 20 courts are not legislatures, and I'm not 21 sure -- I know I don't want them to be. I want 22 the courts to be courts and the legislature to 23 be legislature. They each have their 24 respective functions and they should operate 25 according to their own rules. They also should

1 be kept separate institutionally. The court
2 has to be somewhat removed from the political 3 fray because they are there to make, perhaps, 4 some tough and unpopular decisions at some 5 point in time.

6 But, when they step over that 7 boundary into the legislative arena by 8 nullifying statutes, then, perhaps, they should 9 be governed. The problem you are going to run 10 into I think, if we pass the statute telling 11 the court they have to do this under the 12 Sunshine Law, they'll nullify it and say it's 13 procedural, and you'll be back right where you 14 started from.

15 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: I'm not 16 disagreeing that that's maybe what they do, but 17 that's shame on them if they do that. I'm 18 thinking, perhaps, the court --

19 SENATOR PICCOLA: They've actually I 20 guess already done that. We tried to apply our 21 ethics code to the court, to lawyers for that 22 matter. The court has said that's within its 23 providence, and has not allowed that to be 24 applied to the court or the judicial branch of 25 government.

1                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: I agree with 2                   you. What I'm suggesting is that, perhaps the 3                   court take a look at itself and say, maybe the 4                   process that we're doing this is inappropriate
5                   and we should be more public about this so 6                   those in the public, including the legislature, 7                   has a better understanding.

8                   I guess what I'm suggesting, and I 9                   think Representative Caltagirone touched on 10                  this a little bit, there are lots of decisions
11                  that the court makes and I agree with and I
12                  really like and I think are doing a super job.
13                  Then there's decisions that I disagree with and 14                  I think they're terrible, but I'm not 15                  suggesting that we then challenge the court's 16                  right to do that and try to interfere with that 17                  process. I think you feel the same way, at 18                  least what I'm hearing.

19                  SENATOR PICCOLA: Absolutely.

20                  CHAIRPERSON GANNON: There may be a 21                  incident where we pass a law and in our view 22                  it's a great piece of legislation. It should 23                  be on the books and people want it, and the 24                  court takes a look at it and says, wait a 25                  minute, fellows. This really goes over our

1 rule-making authority. We are going to have a 2 public forum on this so we can discuss it with 3 those parties of interest. Also, we are going 4 to get a good explanation as to where we feel.
5 Perhaps I may not like it, but now I'll 6 understand it. I disagree with them, but 7 they're right.

8 When we get these decisions that 9 particularly, for example, in the death penalty 10 appeal, where do we go from there? When they 11 hold a statute unconstitutional, we get an 12 opinion that says this statute is 13 unconstitutional because, and there's also a 14 dissenting opinion and a concurrent opinion.
15 Frequently we'll come back and say, you know 16 what, we should reframe this statute to 17 overcome those constitutional objections and 18 get something on the books that's going to pass
19 constitutional muster. I don't see any way
20 that we can do that when they simply nullify a 21 statute under their rule-making authority.

22 SENATOR PICCOLA: If I could respond, 23 because you're absolutely right. I think, and 24 I don't have any information here at hand, but 25 from my recollection, the federal rules dealing

1 with death penalty appeals and the like were 2 handled in just that fashion; through the 3 court's rule-making authority, but with the 4 input of the Congress. I would recommend that 5 the committee staff that they take a look at 6 that and see how that was handled.

7 My response to Representative 8 Manderino's question, that is in my view an 9 acceptable way to proceed, but again, we're 10 going to have to amend the Constitution because 11 the court doesn't appear ready to voluntarily
12 sit down with the legislature and engage in a 13 cooperative rule-making procedure. That's 14 another way to look at the process.

15 As I said, Senator Greenleaf I think 16 has a bill in to amend the Constitution along 17 those lines. I would agree with you entirely 18 that that would be an appropriate process if we 19 could somehow get it into being.

20 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you. My 21 second point, from my reading of this section 22 of the Constitution, and I'm not all that 23 certain whether I'm making a correct reading.
24 The court under the Constitution has the 25 authority to declare a statute unconstitutional

1 based upon a case or controversy that comes 2 before it. I'm not all that certain that the 3 framers of this Constitution didn't mean the 4 same thing when they were dealing with the 5 rules of the court.

6 In addition to being able to declare
7 something unconstitutional, you can also look 8 at a statute on a case and controversy basis
9 and say, this violates our rule-making 10 authority. But it would have to have been 11 brought to the court's attention by the 12 litigants who are looking for relief and 13 arguing that, perhaps, the statute violated the 14 rule-making authority. Do you understand?

15 SENATOR PICCOLA: Yes.

16 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: It puts it in 17 the forum where, perhaps, it should be and 18 perhaps the framers meant it to be as opposed 19 to being done behind closed doors in some 20 secrecy and the court just issuing orders and 21 violations of the rules.

22 SENATOR PICCOLA: Absolutely. I
23 think what you're suggesting is, perhaps, and 24 again this goes back to the court looking at 25 itself, and hopefully that's going to be at

1           least one result of this hearing; that the 2           court will look at itself. Even if they on 3           their own motion think they are going to 4           suspend the statute, that they give notice to 5           the General Assembly and we institutionally can 6           appear in open court to attempt to defend our 7           position before the court takes any action that 8           it's going to take with a court order. I think 9           that's what you're suggesting, and that would 10          be entirely appropriate in my estimation.

11                        Maybe exactly what the framers
12           intended, and that I'm not absolutely certain 13           about, but it certainly would be within the 14           language that's there in the Constitution now.

15                        CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very 16           much, Senator, for being with us today. Our 17           next witness is Doctor Lee H. McCormick with 18           the Pennsylvania Medical Society. Welcome, 19           Doctor.

20                        DOCTOR McCORMICK: Thank you. Good
21           morning. My name is Lee McCormick. I'm 22           President of the Pennsylvania Medical Society.
23           The Medical Society is the state's largest 24           physician association, representing some 19,000 25           doctors of all specialties from across the

1 Commonwealth. I'm a family practitioner in the 2 South Hills area of Pittsburgh. With me this 3 morning is Mr. Ken Jones who is legal counsel
4 of the Pennsylvania Medical Society.

5 I appreciate the opportunity to talk
6 to you about the issue which our research shows 7 is the number one concern of physicians and has 8 been for more than 20 years. This issue is 9 tort reform. It is pursuit of that goal, and 10 the court's role in that pursuit, which is what 11 I'm here to talk with you about today.

12 As members of the General Assembly, 13 you have lived with this issue, so you have 14 heard these concerns sometime in the past. But 15 I think it's important to review them with you 16 briefly once again because of their importance 17 to physicians in the state.

18 First, let me start by telling you 19 the three main concerns physicians have with 20 the current tort system. First, too little of 21 what we pay into the system actually goes to 22 those who the system was intended to benefit, 23 and that's our patients. You've heard us say 24 before that studies show only 47 cents of every 25 malpractice dollar collected goes to patients.

1           The other 53 cents goes mostly to lawyers for 2           both sides and to administrators. It seems to 3           me that there is something inherently wrong 4           with any system that spends 53 percent on 5           administrative costs. I dare speculate that if 6           it were discovered that Blue Cross/Blue Shield, 7           for instance, was using only 47 cents of every 8           dollar it collected on health coverage, well, 9           there would be a rate change pretty quickly.

10                    Second, the current system is like a 11           lottery. We all agree that those who deserve
12           payment aren't always the ones getting the 47
13           cents. Beyond that it takes an average of five 14           to six years for claims to work their way
15           through the process. The system is too slow 16           and too arbitrary.

17                    Third, the system is expensive and 18           the expense is unpredictable. For example, 19           Philadelphia area physicians pay probably the 20           highest liability rates in the nation. The 21           effect of that fact on doctors is similar to 22           the effect Philadelphia consumers felt a few 23           years ago when they were paying the highest 24           auto insurance rates in the country. And 25           because of the way our system works with the

1 CAT Fund, there can be an unscheduled liability
2 premium payment due at the end of the year,
3 depending on claims payment unpredictability.
4 Even though there has been only one emergency 5 surcharge, that one in 1995, it can bring havoc 6 to physician offices at just the time when we 7 are gearing up to pay the next year's liability 8 bill.

9 So those concerns give you an idea 10 why this issue is of such interest to 11 physicians. Knowing this, the Pennsylvania
12 Medical Society has worked over the past 25 13 years to make improvements in the system. Let 14 me give you some history which will help 15 explain our concern.

16 Let's turn the clock back to 1975.
17 The liability market in Pennsylvania was out of 18 control. Insurers were threatening to leave.
19 Doctors had reached the breaking point. We 20 worked with this legislature and reached an 21 agreement. We would agree to mandatory 22 insurance and the CAT Fund system and, in 23 return, would get meaningful tort reform which 24 would help fix a system which was out of whack.

25 What physicians wanted most was a

1 binding arbitration system which would have a
2 dual effect. It would move cases to resolution 3 faster and by doing so would save the system 4 money. The legislature passed a bill with an 5 arbitration system; not a binding one, but one 6 where the appeals went to court. It wasn't 7 long until the Supreme Court struck that 8 provision saying that it slowed the process, 9 ironically just what we were trying to fix with 10 binding arbitration. The court also said that 11 the reforms interfered with our patients' right 12 to a jury trial.

13 When all was said and done, tort
14 reform was struck down and the CAT Fund 15 remained. Wasn't that quite a deal for 16 physicians? No one likes the CAT Fund now, and 17 now more than 20 years later, we're trying to 18 figure out a way to get rid of the fund, but 19 the two billion dollar unfunded liability is 20 standing in our way.

21 Now let's move forward to 1996.
22 Increases in the amount of CAT Fund surcharges 23 and that one emergency surcharge in 1995 led to 24 a crisis. Physicians still saw a system
25 totally out of whack and threatened not to pay

1 their 1997 CAT Fund surcharge unless there was 2 some meaningful tort reform. There was an 3 opportunity for some meaningful reform.

4 As an organization, we analyzed
5 carefully what had happened in 1975 and thought 6 we would learn from the court's insistence that 7 the process be made quicker. We worked with 8 the trial bar this time to come up with tort 9 reform which would eliminate frivolous cases, 10 reduce transaction costs and speed the system.
11 The proposals were agreed upon by everyone, 12 including the trial bar. Rarely has any 13 legislation, particularly on such a
14 controversial subject, enjoyed such a wide-15 spread support and such a complete absence of 16 opponents.

17 Did the final proposal include
18 everything we wanted? No. But we thought it 19 was a step in the right direction and decided 20 to work with a broader-based coalition in the 21 future to achieve more reforms.

22 A year ago, after we reached 23 agreement on language that accomplished some of 24 our goals, the amended bill passed unanimously
25 in both the House and Senate and was quickly

1 signed by the Governor. Then in January 1997,
2 the Supreme Court suspended certain provisions
3 and directed its Civil Procedural Rules
4 Committee to consider similar rules. We asked 5 the court to adopt the suspended rules, which 6 were designed to speed up the court process and 7 deter frivolous lawsuits. We told the court
8 that those rules were among the least 9 controversial and most widely supported in Act 10 135.

11 Despite written support from the 12 Medical Society and the trial bar, the Rules
13 Committee changed the act's provisions. Let me
14 briefly outline a few of the Rules Committee's 15 actions.

16 Act 135 attacked frivolous lawsuits
17 by requiring attorneys before they file a 18 lawsuit to have a reasonable basis in fact and 19 in law for believing that they can prevail.
20 The court agreed, but instead of imposing a 21 mandatory award of attorneys' fees in frivolous 22 cases, the Supreme Court left that decision to 23 the court's discretion. This change diluted
24 the effectiveness of this provision.

25 Act 135 also set up time frames for

1 completion of discovery and obtaining an expert 2 witness report, all running from the date of 3 the filing of the lawsuit. The revised Supreme 4 Court rules also set up time frames, but does 5 not mandate them and runs those dates from the 6 earliest trial date; not the filing of the 7 lawsuit. These changes will not significantly 8 speed up the system.

9 Finally, Act 135's intent was to 10 eliminate the frivolous suit early. We believe 11 this provision could have had a significant 12 impact. The Supreme Court instead requires an 13 expert report, but only after the earliest 14 trial date. That will not be nearly as 15 effective in eliminating the frivolous cases 16 early.

17 So that's where we are today. We 18 have been through lots of work and even more 19 compromise. And what do we have to show for 20 it? A liability system that everyone, 21 including the public, thinks needs to be 22 changed. The public can't affect change
23 without the legislature. The legislature made 24 the changes that were agreed upon by all the 25 parties, and some of those changes were

1           suspended and turned back to the court's own
2           authority. Honestly, it's frustrating, 3           especially when the proposals are reasonable
4           and have widespread support.

5                     Let's face it. We know that not 6           everyone would agree with the proposals of the 7           Pennsylvania Medical Society. But, if we're 8           going to make the system better, the 9           legislature needs the ability to be innovative.
10          Unfortunately, the court has stymied not only 11          innovation, but also stymied your efforts to 12          help us. So, where does that leave us? Sadly, 13          after 20 years, we've made little progress 14          towards addressing the real problems created by 15          our medical liability system.

16                    Thank you, and I'll be happy to 17          answer your questions.

18                    CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
19          Doctor McCormick. Representative Caltagirone.

20                    REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: No
21          questions.

22                    CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Just a question
23          or comment. In your statement on page 2 you
24          say, in January 1997, the Supreme Court 25          suspended certain provisions and directed its

1 Civil Procedural Rules Committee to consider
2 similar rules. Are you saying that at the time
3 that the Supreme Court suspended the statute
4 they did not have rules in place?

5 MR. JONES: Yes, essentially what 6 happened was, as the testimony indicates, there 7 were no rules on those subjects in effect at 8 the time, but the Supreme Court determined to 9 refer the matter covering those subjects to 10 their Civil Procedural Rules Committee which 11 ended up adopting roughly half and recommending 12 to the Supreme Court roughly half of what had 13 been in the legislation. The Supreme Court has 14 now adopted those amended rules.

15 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: How long after 16 this January 1997 suspension did the court
17 promulgate its substantive rules?

18 MR. JONES: If memory serves, it was 19 September of this year. I believe the rules
20 are going to go into effect in December.

21 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: So approximately 22 11, 12 months?

23 MR. JONES: Yes.

24 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: This may be a 25 rhetorical question, but in light of that, how

1 does that gel and how is that consistent with 2 the provision that says, rules prescribed under 3 these provisions? The way I read that, the 4 rules would have to be in place before it would 5 determine the statute was inconsistent.

6 MR. JONES: Obviously, when we 7 supported these provisions before the 8 legislature, and as Doctor McCormick has 9 indicated, there was a lot of compromise and a 10 fair amount of time spent on this. Obviously, 11 we thought that the rules -- the statute that 12 was adopted was going to be constitutional.
13 The reason that you gave is one of those 14 reasons.

15 The other reason, of course, is the 16 argument about what's procedural and what is 17 not. We thought at least we had a reasonable 18 argument that none of these provisions were 19 procedural. The difficulty we had was, we 20 never got to argue that to the Supreme Court or 21 to anyone else.

22 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very
23 much for your testimony today, Doctor
24 McCormick.

25 DOCTOR McCORMICK: Thank you.

1                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Our next witness
2 is Mr. Jules Epstein, attorney, with Kairys, 3 Rudovsky, Epstein, Messing and Rau. Welcome,
4 Mr. Epstein.

5                   MR. EPSTEIN: Thank you. Mr.
6 Chairman, members of the committee: Good
7 morning. I have provided written testimony, 8 but I would much prefer to depart from that and 9 get to the gist of some of the comments that 10 were made today. I'll briefly explain my 11 background and my interest in being here.

12                   I'm an attorney with 19 plus years
13 experience in the field of criminal defense 14 work, trial and appellate, with numerous 15 appearances before the Supreme Court. I teach 16 part time at Penn Law School. I write about 17 criminal law. My practice is criminal law, and 18 I've tried to study and understand it.

19                   I'd like to begin at the end, almost, 20 and go to a suggestion that you, Mr. Chairman, 21 made earlier I believe when Senator Piccola was 22 speaking. What disturbs me in different ways, 23 but as much as what disturbs so many members of 24 this committee and the legislature is what I 25 call the lack of a proper procedure when the 1 Supreme Court does things. I don't like the 2 words unaccountable that I heard today because 3 the Supreme Court needs to be this secluded and 4 protective place of deliberation. I certainly 5 don't like the words impeachable coupled with 6 similar discussion that none of us can even 7 agree what is procedural and what is not. I

8 don't know. I'm not sure about evidence.

9 I have some feelings about PCRA and 10 CURA and those issues, and I'll come back to 11 them in a moment. But, I think the suggestion 12 that you made is the most appropriate because 13 it dovetails with problems in other areas of 14 Supreme Court practice, and that's an 15 opportunity to be heard.

16 I'm not sure it has to be in the case
17 and controversy context. Frankly, in some ways 18 that's too cumbersome, because if we wait for 19 eight years until the first CURA case gets to 20 Pennsylvania Supreme Court and then they strike 21 it down, no one has been done justice. Those 22 who are opposed to the death penalty--I'll be 23 blunt, I'm in that number--are not done 24 justice. Those who favor the death penalty and 25 are trying to move it expeditiously similarly

1 have suffered. If you have a flawed procedure, 2 we ought to know fairly early on.

3 What I suggest is the simple remedy
4 without tinkering greatly with the separation
5 of powers that I think everyone here has stated 6 utmost respect for and understanding of is a 7 notice provision; something that could be as 8 simple as, when the Pennsylvania Supreme Court 9 intends to proceed under the constitutional 10 authority of suspending rules as being 11 inconsistent with their own rules, they have to 12 give 60 days' notice to this chamber; to these 13 chambers I should say. I'm not sure because I 14 only thought of that from your comment and 15 hearing Senator Piccola and the learned
16 exchange that was going on there, I'm not sure 17 if that has to be done legislatively or has to 18 be done by constitutional amendment.

19 I tend to suspect that if this House 20 and the Senate started with a resolution to the 21 court saying, we'd really like you to do this, 22 it wouldn't hurt. It would be the quickest 23 remedy you all could start with, and it would 24 be very telling to see what the response was.
25 I suspect, because I'm sure they understand

1           some of these concerns, that that would be a
2           process that would be welcomed.

3                     If not, I agree with some of the 4           other comments here about shame, but that's the 5           issue, isn't it? Because none of us can even 6           say which is procedural; none of us can say 7           which is substantive.

8                     Let me now turn from that. I hope 9           that is a proposal that is welcomed, or at 10          least shows some concern for what is going on 11          here to just a couple other matters that have 12          been touched upon. I will start with CURA, 13          both because I know it and it certainly touches 14          upon my practice which includes heavily 15          representation of individuals charged with 16          homicide.

17                    I say this most respectfully. I'm 18          but one attorney. I found it fatally flawed 19          for numerous constitutional issues. I wish the 20          court had grappled with that. I will advise 21          this body--you may have been aware of this-- 22          that there was a petition before the court 23          asking them to reach out and deal with it.
24          They didn't do it in even that semi-orderly way 25          of saying, we've got this petition. Let's have

1           briefs, whatever.

2                         Again, I suggest to you, as I said
3 before, foes and friends of the death penalty
4 are probably better off that they acted now
5 because I suggest again, most respectfully,
6 that there were such problems of such severe 7 constitutional dimension that having CURA in 8 place for five years would have added five, 10 9 or 15 years onto death penalty litigation.
10 Although I'm affirmatively personally not 11 adverse to that, I understand that that is not 12 the thrust of the thinking of many people here.

13                         Let me digress only briefly, and some 14 of this is reflected in the materials I 15 submitted here, and talk about the court as 16 seen by me, an attorney. I'm an attorney with 17 a particular bent and a particular practice and 18 that's the practice of criminal defense. I
19 sure don't agree with a lot of their rulings
20 and then some. I heard one previous speaker 21 say they are unfriendly to the death penalty.
22 Please, eliminate that comment from the record.
23 It is woefully inaccurate to say the least.
24 They have bent over backwards from this 25 lawyer's perspective to uphold the death

1 penalty. I suggest they are so out of line
2 that federal courts may be reversing them in 3 years to come.

4 Putting that aside, there are 5 problems with the court of process. What this 6 committee is focusing on now is one such 7 problem. Attorneys file petitions in cases and 8 the petitions are lost. It's almost like when 9 an airplane hits a glacier and it gets sucked 10 into the glacier and 40 years later it rises to 11 the surface. Prosecutors see this problem;
12 defense attorneys see this problem. It's 13 there. How that's remedied, I don't know.

14 The Superior Court seems to run at 15 least somewhat better in terms of getting 16 petitions and acting on them. You get prompt 17 results. Not always what you want by a long 18 shot, but you get a response. People can file 19 petitions and they sit and they go nowhere.
20 So, it's the procedural issues that I suggest 21 are an endemic problem across the board.

22 If I may turn briefly to CURA which 23 I've already talk about in code of evidence, I 24 have to say again, I'm not sure who should be 25 writing a code of evidence in Pennsylvania. I

1 say that most deferentially. When I say I'm 2 not sure, it's not said out of disrespect, but 3 I can't figure out where in the constitutional 4 division of powers that law is. I do know at 5 least in that one, the Supreme Court has been 6 creating an evidence code ad hoc for 200 plus 7 years because all rules of evidence were common 8 law.

9 So, as a personal matter, and I can 10 only say it this way, I'm not that upset or 11 frightened that they are thinking they do have 12 something to do with rules of evidence. I 13 don't know enough about medical malpractice or 14 garnishing of wages to give any opinion as to 15 whether that is procedural.

16 I will say I found their evidence 17 rule-making process somewhat orderly. They 18 published a proposed code. They solicited
19 comments, all the things I want them to finally 20 be doing. You could even do it by E-Mail,
21 which I did. I submitted written criticisms 22 and compliments and suggested additions and 23 deletions. Now I assuming that that's all 24 under consideration and I hope so.

25 My last comment, and if it's far off

1 the mark forgive me. When I first heard about 2 this series of hearings, some people who 3 presented it to me and suggested that I testify 4 were saying, the legislature is looking at 5 judicial activism. I have not heard that term
6 today, although when some people talk about a 7 court out of control or impeachable, it seems 8 to bring with that same resonant. I say this 9 most deferentially. Two points please.

10 There's judicial activism that's 11 conservative as well as, quote, liberal or 12 radical or wide-eyed and bushy-tailed, or 13 whatever categories we are going to have. I 14 tend to think that in many of their decisions 15 the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has been an 16 activist in going beyond what this legislature
17 passed, in sentencing issues and the like. I 18 don't want to spend time on them. I can give 19 illustrations later if anyone feels the need.

20 I don't like that terminology, and 21 frankly it somewhat scares me. I'm not a fan
22 of the court in a lot of its decisions. I'm 23 not a fan of some of the personalities. My 24 personal proclivity is, I think we'd probably 25 do better with an appointed judiciary when I

1 look at examples from other states. I'm not 2 here to pat them on the back. Notwithstanding 3 that, and I know many members of this committee
4 and I hope of the entire Senate and House feel 5 this, the need for their independence cannot be 6 questioned.

7 I hope that my humble suggestion,
8 which is really your suggestion, Mr. Chairman, 9 and I will end, as I said, where I began which 10 is at the ending is to do some concrete steps
11 to encourage, and I'm not sure it's Sunshine 12 Law steps or whatever, but to encourage 13 consideration of positions before action in an 14 expeditious way. That will resolve most of the 15 problems that led to this set of hearings.

16 With that, in submission of my 17 written comments, I thank you for the 18 opportunity to appear here today.

19 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you, Mr.
20 Epstein. Representative Caltagirone.

22 questions.

23 CHAIRPERSON GANNON. I'm impressed
24 with your testimony. In an earlier comment you 25 made, you said we probably don't know the

1 difference between procedure and substantive 2 law. I'm going to meet you halfway. We 3 probably do know the difference between 4 procedure and substantive law. The problem is,
5 none of us can agree on it. Each individual 6 probably can say I can tell you what it is. As 7 a group we disagree. I recognize that and 8 that's why I made the comment that I thought, 9 perhaps, we should look to the process first 10 and see if that would help alleviate the 11 situation.

12 I guess judicial activism whether you
13 are for it or against it depends on where you 14 stand on that particular issue. That would 15 concern me if we start to take a vent towards 16 disagreeing with decisions and then acting on 17 that, or agreeing with decisions and acting on 18 that. As I said earlier, there's lots of 19 decisions I agree with; there's lots I disagree
20 with, but that doesn't necessarily mean I 21 should meddle in the court's business. But at 22 the same time, and I think many members of this 23 panel feel the same way, we don't want the 24 court meddling in our business. Perhaps that's 25 maybe the underlying reason that we're looking

1 at it from this aspect.

2 I do appreciate your comments and the 3 written testimony you submitted. Thank you
4 very much for being with us today.

5 MR. EPSTEIN: Again, thank you for 6 allowing me to appear. Good morning, everyone.

7 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: We are going to 8 take a break for about 10 minutes until 12
9 noon. We'll reconvene at 12 noon exactly.

10 (Short recess occurred)

11 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Judiciary
12 meeting reconvened. Attorney General Fisher is 13 presently in court defending the rights of the 14 Commonwealth. He may or may not get here at 15 all, depending on how long the hearing will 16 last. We're going to ask Mr. Robert Graci, 17 Esquire, Chief Deputy Attorney General for the 18 Attorney General's Office to speak in place of 19 the Honorable D. Michael Fisher, Attorney
20 General of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.
21 You may proceed, Mr. Graci.

22 MR. GRACI: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.
23 Good afternoon, members of the Judiciary
24 Committee. On behalf of Attorney General Mike 25 Fisher, I want to thank you for the opportunity

1 to testify concerning the subject of this 2 hearing, the Supreme Court's rule-making
3 authority and its related authority to suspend 4 acts of the General Assembly to the extent they 5 are in inconsistent with properly promulgated
6 rules prescribed by the Supreme Court.

7 As you mentioned, Mr. Chairman, the 8 Attorney General is unavailable today because 9 he's in court defending the rights of the 10 Commonwealth. He's in the Commonwealth Court 11 as we speak on a motion for preliminary 12 injunction filed by individuals in the last two 13 weeks trying to strike from the ballot
14 scheduled for vote of the populous next Tuesday 15 of that constitutional amendment passed by this 16 body and the Senate in conformity with the 17 appropriate provisions of the Constitution that 18 would amend that part of the Constitution
19 dealing with pardons and paroles. He regrets 20 he's not able to be with you. He hoped that he 21 would, but the hearing is apparently going 22 longer than he anticipated.

23 With your permission, Mr. Chairman,
24 I'd like to present my testimony by first 25 giving a brief history of the Supreme Court's

1 rule-making authority and its power to suspend 2 acts of the General Assembly. Next, I would 3 like to describe the court's order of August 4 11, 1997, suspending in its entirety the 5 Capital Unitary Review Act, or CURA, and along 6 with that Attorney General Fisher's petition
7 seeking reconsideration of that order.

8 Finally, Mr. Chairman, I wish to 9 offer comments and suggestions to strip the 10 court of what it apparently believes is an 11 exclusive grant of constitutional power and 12 which, as presently interpreted, is a 13 completely unchecked and unreviewable grant of 14 power.

15 Turning if I might, Mr. Chairman, and 16 members of the committee, to the history. The 17 present source of the Supreme Court's rule-
18 making authority and its authority to suspend
19 acts of the General Assembly is, as Senator
20 Piccola pointed out, found in Article V,
21 Section 10 of the Constitution. The relevant 22 parts of that section provide, the Supreme 23 Court shall have the power to prescribe general 24 rules governing practice, procedure and the 25 conduct of all courts...and the administration

1 of all courts...if such rules are consistent 2 with this Constitution--that is, the 3 Constitution of the Commonwealth--and neither
4 abridge, enlarge nor modify the substantive
5 rights of any litigant; nor affect the right of 6 the General Assembly to determine the 7 jurisdiction of any court or justice of the 8 peace; nor suspend nor alter any statute of 9 limitation or repose. All laws shall be 10 suspended to the extent they are inconsistent 11 with rules prescribed under these provisions.

12 While this grant of rule-making power 13 to the Supreme Court was only added to the 14 Constitution in 1968, the general concept had 15 been part of our statutory law; that is, acts 16 passed by this body, since 1937, more than 17 three decades earlier.

18 By the Act of June 21, 1937, the 19 General Assembly gave the Supreme Court, and I 20 quote from the statute...the power to prescribe 21 by general rule...the practice and procedure in 22 civil actions at law and in equity for the 23 Courts of Common Pleas...and for such other 24 courts having jurisdiction in civil actions.
25 Provided, that such rules shall be consistent

1 with the Constitution of this Commonwealth and 2 shall neither abridge, enlarge nor modify the 3 substantive rights of any litigant nor the 4 jurisdiction of any of the said courts, nor 5 affect any statute of limitations.

6 Of particular note was the last 7 paragraph of the Section of 1937 Act of 8 Assembly. It said, and again I quote, From and 9 after the effective date of any rule
10 promulgated under this Section 1, and so long 11 as said rule shall be operative, the operation 12 of any act of assembly relating to practice or 13 procedure in such courts, and inconsistent with 14 such rule, shall be suspended insofar as such 15 act may be inconsistent with such rule.

16 Two decades after passing that 17 statute, Mr. Chairman, members of the 18 committee, the legislature granted like 19 authority to both the Supreme and Superior 20 Courts with respect to promulgating rules of 21 procedure in criminal cases. The first grant 22 had been limited to civil cases. Like its 23 counterpart, the legislative grant of rule-
24 making power in criminal cases and proceedings 25 concluded with language identical to the

1 language found in the 1937 bill, which gave the 2 court the power to suspend duly enacted
3 statutes, but only to the extent inconsistent 4 with rules promulgated pursuant to the 5 legislative grant.

6 It's interesting to note from an 7 historical perspective, and given we are 8 presently most concerned with the Supreme 9 Court's wholesale suspension of a statutorily
10 based post-conviction proceeding as set forth 11 in CURA, that the 1957 statute was the 12 authority by which the Supreme and Superior
13 Courts by orders dated January 24 and January 14 27, 1968, respectively, promulgated the 15 original rules to implement the 1966 enactment 16 of the Post-Conviction Hearing Act, which, as 17 you all know, is the predecessor of today's 18 Post-Conviction Relief Act.

19 It was also by that authority that 20 the courts, after promulgating the rules to 21 implement the PCHA, suspended the PCHA, but 22 only to the extent inconsistent with the rules.
23 There was no wholesale suspension of the PCHA.
24 The courts specifically stated, in suspending
25 the parts of the PCHA that were inconsistent

1 with the new rules, that, quote, this is done
2 in accordance with the provisions of Section 1
3 of the 1957 act.

4 Indeed, the Supreme Court's Criminal
5 Procedural Rules Committee would later say of 6 the rules promulgated in 1968, these rules were 7 not intended to provide a complete procedural 8 framework for post-conviction proceedings, but 9 were to supplement, implement and clarify the 10 procedural provisions of the PCHA. The present 11 rules do not, therefore, supersede all or even 12 particular individual sections of the PCHA.
13 Instead, Rule 1507 suspends the PCHA only 14 insofar as it is inconsistent with the Criminal 15 Procedural Rules, and there are very few 16 inconsistencies.

17 These statutory provisions are the 18 genesis of the current constitutional provision 19 found at Article V, Section 10(c).

20 This historical background is 21 important for several reasons. It informs us 22 of the basis for the current constitutional 23 text. For all intents and purposes, the 24 language is identical to that found in the 25 earlier statutory grants of rule-making power.

1           The limits found in the Constitution are the 2           same limits found in the predecessor statutes:
3           Rules adopted by the Supreme Court may neither
4           abridge, enlarge nor modify the substantive 5           rights of litigants nor the jurisdiction of the 6           court. Those matters are left to the 7           Constitution itself or to this body, the 8           General Assembly, as the policy-making branch 9           of government.

10                   And of particular importance for 11           today's hearing and your consideration, the 12           authority of the Supreme Court to suspend the 13           operation of any act of the General Assembly is 14           limited by the Constitution itself...as it was 15           in the statutes as recognized by the Supreme 16           Court...to only those situations where there is 17           an inconsistency with an existing, properly 18           prescribed and promulgated rule.

19                   That, Mr. Chairman, brings me to my 20           second point: The Supreme Court's August 11, 21           1997 order suspending CURA in its entirety.
22           That action, according to the text of the 23           order, was taken pursuant to the court's 24           authority under Article V, Section 10 of the 25           Constitution of Pennsylvania. If I might give

1           some background.

2                       Immediately upon taking office,
3           Governor Ridge convened a special and 4           extraordinary session of the General Assembly 5           on crime to consider 11 specific subjects. The 6           first subject listed in the Governor's 7           proclamation was to consider legislation for,
8           and I quote, an orderly process to implement 9           the death penalty.

10                      In response to the Governor's call,
11           the General Assembly enacted a bill amending 12           the PCHA (sic) and adding CURA. That bill was 13           enacted on November 17 and became effective 60
14           days later on January 16th of 1996.

15                      The PCRA, as amended, still provides 16           for an action by which persons convicted of 17           crimes they did not commit and persons serving 18           illegal sentences may obtain collateral relief.
19           It applies to all noncapital cases and to 20           capital cases in which a death penalty was 21           imposed before January 1, 1996.

22                      CURA, on the other hand, establishes 23           the sole means of challenging proceedings that 24           resulted in a sentence of death. CURA replaced 25           post-appeal collateral review of death penalty

1 cases as was previously provided under the 2 general applicable PCRA with pre-appeal
3 collateral review. It combined the direct 4 review process with the collateral review 5 process in capital cases and was to apply in 6 all cases in which the death penalty is imposed
7 on or before January 1, 1996.

8 In providing for unitary review in 9 death penalty cases, the General Assembly 10 recognized that in these most serious cases the 11 normal course after trial, conviction for 12 murder of the first degree and imposition of 13 the sentence of death was the filing of 14 post-sentence motions followed by the 15 statutorily required, automatic direct review
16 in the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

17 The General Assembly knew when it
18 enacted CURA that frequently in these cases new 19 counsel replaced trial counsel at the 20 post-sentence and direct appeal stages and 21 frequently raised and litigated claims of 22 ineffective assistance of trial counsel. The 23 General Assembly also knew when it enacted CURA
24 that in most of these cases review was sought 25 in the United States Supreme Court by way of 1 petitions for writs of certiorari after 2 affirmance by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

3 The General Assembly was aware when 4 it enacted CURA that after the direct appellate 5 process was over, a death sentenced convict
6 would do nothing by way of seeking collateral
7 relief until the Governor issued a warrant 8 scheduling an execution, at which point the 9 condemned would file a petition under the PCRA, 10 obtain a stay of the scheduled execution, 11 litigate the petition, and, assuming the 12 conviction and death sentence remained intact,
13 the trial court's decision on the PCRA petition 14 would almost automatically be appealed to the 15 State Supreme Court.

16 The General Assembly knew when it
17 enacted CURA that these layered proceedings
18 collaterally attacking lawfully imposed death 19 sentences contributed to lengthy and 20 unnecessary delays in these cases and thwarted 21 the legislatively established public policy of 22 the Commonwealth. It was against this backdrop 23 that the General Assembly enacted CURA as 24 seeking an orderly process to implement the 25 death penalty by replacing post-appeal

1 collateral review of death penalty cases with 2 pre-appeal collateral review.

3 By order dated August 11th of this 4 year, the Supreme Court permanently suspended
5 CURA in its entirety, claiming authority to do 6 so under Article V, Section 10 of the 7 Constitution of Pennsylvania. But the Supreme 8 Court may constitutionally suspend laws only to 9 the extent that they are inconsistent with 10 rules prescribed under the provisions of 11 Article V, Section 10(c), as I said in 12 outlining the history of the constitutional 13 grant of rule-making authority.

14 CURA, as I just noted, established
15 the sole means of challenging proceedings that 16 resulted in a sentence of death, and replaced 17 post-appeal collateral review with pre-appeal
18 collateral review. None of the rules
19 promulgated by the same order that suspended 20 CURA to align Chapter 1500 of the Rules of 21 Criminal Procedure with the recent legislative 22 amendments to the PCRA have anything to do with 23 replacing post-appeal collateral review with 24 pre-appeal collateral review in capital cases 25 where a sentence of death was imposed after

1           January 1, 1996.

2                         While the Supreme Court could 3           constitutionally promulgate rules to implement
4           this sole means of challenging post-January 1, 5           1996 death sentence proceedings with pre-appeal
6           collateral review, just as it has promulgated 7           rules to implement the action provided for in 8           the PCRA, it is not, that is, the Supreme Court 9           is not constitutionally empowered to simply 10          ignore this sole means of collateral attack in 11          cases to which it applies under the guise of 12          its constitutionally limited rule-making
13          authority.

14                        The Attorney General believes that in 15          suspending CURA without prescribing rules for 16          pre-appeal collateral review in cases to which 17          CURA would apply, the Supreme Court has 18          exceeded its constitutional rule-making 19          authority under Article V, Section 10(c).

20                        On September 26th of this year,
21          Attorney General Fisher petitioned to the court 22          to reconsider its order suspending CURA and 23          parts of the PCRA. There are several bases for 24          that petition, including the one that I've just 25          noted; that is, the Supreme Court exceeded its

1 authority. I will outline the others for you.

2 In the order suspending CURA, despite 3 the fact as I indicated that it conflicts with 4 no court-made rule on pre-appeal collateral
5 review, and amending Chapter 1500 of the Rules 6 of Criminal Procedure, the court observed that 7 the recommendation of the Criminal Procedural 8 Rules Committee, which it purports to adopt,
9 and I quote, had been published before adoption
10 in the Pennsylvania Bulletin in May 18, 1996, 11 16 months before the court adopted these rules.

12 However, the recommendation of the 13 Criminal Procedural Rules Committee contained
14 in the Pennsylvania Bulletin was concerned only 15 with the PCRA. The committee in its 16 explanatory comment clearly said that, quote, 17 It concluded that the rules of criminal 18 procedure should continue to implement only the 19 PCRA, and agreed to add a committee note, to 20 make it clear that Chapter 1500 does not apply 21 to the new Capital Unitary Review Act. With 22 that statement, it was disingenuous for the 23 court to suggest that the Bench and Bar at 24 large were on notice of the possible suspension 25 of CURA, in its entirety, under the court's

1 constitutionally limited rule-making authority.

2 The proposal which was published by 3 the Criminal Procedural Rules Committee was 4 substantially altered to the form which 5 accompanied the court's order of August 11, 6 1997, including for the first time, and without 7 the possibility of public comment, substantial 8 provisions dealing with death penalty cases
9 which were not previously specifically
10 addressed in the Rules of Criminal Procedure
11 related to post-conviction proceedings.

12 Pursuant to the Supreme Court's own 13 rules of judicial administration, previous 14 distribution and publication of proposed rules
15 may be dispensed with only where exigent 16 circumstances require immediate adoption of the 17 proposal, or where the proposal is of a 18 typographical or perfunctory nature, or where 19 the court determines that such action is 20 required in the interests of justice or 21 efficient administration.

22 The amendments to Chapter 1500,
23 needless to say, are neither perfunctory nor 24 typographical. There is no stated exigency,
25 and none readily appears since the Criminal

1 Procedural Rules Committee published its 2 original PCRA proposal, without regard to CURA 3 cases, more than 14 months before the court's 4 August 11, 1997 order, and CURA itself did not 5 become effective until two months after it was 6 enacted.

7 Moreover, the court identified no
8 interest of justice or efficient administration
9 to justify its drastic action of suspending a 10 carefully crafted act of the General Assembly
11 intended to implement the Commonwealth's public 12 policy of having a death penalty and of having 13 an orderly process to implement it.

14 Suspending CURA and implementing 15 rules which perpetuates post-appeal collateral 16 review in these cases under the guise of the 17 courts rule-making authority, without prior 18 publication and distribution, therefore, 19 violates the court's own procedure for adopting 20 rules.

21 Moreover, in suspending CURA, the 22 Supreme Court abridged the rights of the 23 Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, a litigant in 24 every death penalty case, by prolonging these 25 cases and delaying final judgment and execution

1 in violation of the policy of the Commonwealth 2 as promulgated by the only branch of the 3 Commonwealth's government with the authority to 4 do so, this body, the General Assembly.

5 The court, in violation of the 6 constitutional limits on its authority,
7 enlarged or modified the rights of defendants 8 in capital cases where a death penalty is 9 imposed by maintaining a regime of post-appeal
10 collateral review which was rejected as a 11 matter of policy in these cases by the 12 policy-setting branch of the government of the 13 Commonwealth.

14 Lastly, the Supreme Court acted
15 unconstitutionally, in excess of its authority, 16 by suspending the statute of limitations found 17 in CURA, which, as I indicated, is the sole 18 means of challenging proceedings that resulted 19 in a death sentence imposed after January 1, 20 1996, and as well, unconstitutionally affected
21 the right of the General Assembly to determine 22 the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court in 23 suspending the 1995 and 1997 amendments to 24 Section 9546(d) of the PCRA concerning 25 jurisdiction to hear appeals from denials of 1 PCRA petitions in capital cases.

2 It's Attorney General Fisher's hope
3 that the Supreme Court vacates its order 4 suspending CURA and adopts rules implementing 5 it, including the promulgation of counsel 6 standards for these most serious cases known to 7 our criminal justice system.

8 But even if that happens, it does not 9 address the larger question with which you, and 10 quite properly should be concerned. Should the 11 Supreme Court's apparently absolute and 12 unchecked rule-making authority continue
13 unabated? Attorney General Fisher thinks not.
14 The Constitution must be rewritten.

15 I'm going to make a quote, Mr.
16 Chairman, and it states, by the Constitution of 17 1968, power was given to the Supreme Court to 18 prescribe general rules governing practice,
19 procedure and conduct of courts, justices of 20 the peace and the officers serving process.
21 Since that time, rule making by the Supreme 22 Court has gained impetus.

23 The rules which have been prescribed
24 under this provision have been generally viewed 25 as promoting the efficiency of the judiciary,

1 but whether the rapidly increasing use of this 2 power by the Supreme Court is leading to 3 excesses remains for future determination. At 4 present, the legislature and the Supreme Court 5 differ over where the line separating the 6 powers of each should be drawn. Drawing the 7 line through the gray area will take time. The 8 friction between these two branches of 9 government surfaces in the cloakrooms of the 10 legislature and, presumably, in the conference 11 rooms of the court; if not in the sunshine of 12 the printed record.

13 Although the separation involves 14 technical problems not always recognized or 15 fully understood by all legislators, some 16 believe the court is trespassing on legislative 17 territory. On the other hand, the court is 18 convinced the legislature is invading the 19 judicial field to which the Constitution gives 20 exclusive power to the courts. This is an 21 ever-existing struggle for power, end of quote.

22 Mr. Chairman, these are not my words.
23 They are the words of the eminent Pennsylvania
24 constitutional scholar, Judge Robert Woodside,
25 taken from his treatise, Pennsylvania

1 Constitutional Law, written 12 years ago. They 2 were written more than a decade ago but they 3 could have been written today. In that decade, 4 the Supreme Court's use of its power has led to 5 excesses. The time for drawing the line has 6 arrived. The future, Mr. Chairman, is now.

7 Almost 20 years ago, in responding to 8 a claim that it overstepped its constitutional 9 rule-making authority and made substantive law, 10 the Supreme Court said, and I quote, It should 11 not be prevented from exercising its duty to 12 resolve procedural questions merely because of 13 a collateral effect on a substantive right.
14 Assuming this proposition is correct, the 15 converse must also be correct.

16 The Supreme Court has recognized that 17 this body, the General Assembly, has the power 18 to promulgate all the substantive law of this 19 jurisdiction. The courts, quite simply, do 20 not. That a substantive enactment by the 21 General Assembly, when exercising its 22 constitutional legislative power, has a
23 collateral effect on procedural questions
24 necessary to its implementation cannot prevent 25 the General Assembly from exercising its

1 constitutional power to make, alter and repeal 2 laws.

3 As has been recognized by at least 4 one member of the Supreme Court, the 5 legislature, this body, with unique fact-
6 finding capacities designed not only to correct
7 but also to anticipate social problems, both 8 broadly declares public policies and minutely
9 provides for details of implementation.

10 Presently, however, the Supreme Court
11 always gets the last word. Once the court
12 concludes that a matter is proper for rule 13 making, even if it agrees that a rule has a 14 collateral effect on a substantive right, and 15 virtually all of them do, the court has the 16 ability, in its sole determination of the scope 17 of its rule-making authority, and often without 18 the benefit of the adversarial advocacy as it 19 did in striking CURA from the statute books, to 20 upset the policy established by the legislative 21 branch of our government. Under the present
22 constitutional scheme, the rule-making power
23 and the power to suspend laws which the court 24 determines to violative of that rule-making
25 power knows no checks. The court and the court

1 alone decides the limits of its power.

2 Such unrestrained power is unheard of 3 in a democracy. It certainly should not exist 4 in the hands of the least democratic branch of 5 government where, once elected, its members are 6 virtually unaccountable to the will of the 7 people.

8 The Pennsylvania Constitution,
9 members of the committee, should be amended to 10 allow for rule making in the courts as allowed 11 under the federal system, with legislative 12 oversight. Under that system, a proposed rule 13 is not effective until the Congress has the 14 ability to review and change it.

15 In addition, the Congress can write
16 rules of procedures in the first instance.
17 This provision recognizes that oftentimes
18 procedural rules are necessary to effectuate 19 policy choices made by the legislature. Last 20 year, for example, the Congress amended the 21 federal habeas corpus rules at the same time it 22 amended the statute when it attempted to 23 streamline that federal collateral review
24 process.

25 Court rule making should be a matter

1 of legislative delegation. The Attorney
2 General agrees with Duquesne University law
3 professor and criminal defense attorney Bruce
4 Ledewitz who, in 1994, proposed that Article V,
5 Section 10(c) be repealed, to be replaced by a 6 simple statement which he suggests should say, 7 quote, the Supreme Court shall exercise such 8 powers and performs such duties as may be 9 imposed by law. The Attorney General agrees,
10 Mr. Chairman.

11 I hope these comments are helpful to 12 you and the members of the committee as you 13 consider this serious separation-of-powers 14 problem. I would be happy to try to respond to 15 any questions the committee members might have.

16 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very
17 much, Mr. Graci. Representative Caltagirone.

18 REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: No.

20 Manderino.

21 REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Thank you.
22 Thank you, Mr. Graci. I'm just a little 23 confused. This is out of ignorance because I 24 never saw what was actually published, came 25 down from, whatever the right word is, the

1 Supreme Court on the CURA thing. I guess I was 2 led to believe by prior testimony that it was 3 just basically a blanket, this is suspended
4 because it interferes with our rule-making
5 authority.

6 But then something that you said led 7 me to believe that there was more to it when 8 you talked about in the order suspending CURA 9 the Supreme Court observed that the 10 recommendation of the Criminal Procedural Rules 11 Committee, which it purports to adopt, had been 12 published prior to the adoption, et cetera, et 13 cetera. What specifically came down? Where 14 was it published? Where can I get a copy of 15 it? Maybe I can decide for myself what it 16 said. That would be very helpful.

17 MR. GRACI: Representative Manderino,
18 it's published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin. I 19 thought I had a copy of it with me. I do not.
20 I looked at it enough, particularly preparing 21 the Attorney General's petition asking the 22 court to reconsider it, that I have it pretty 23 much committed to memory.

24 It was a standard order similar to 25 any other order by which the Supreme Court

1           adopts rules. It was, I believe in five or six 2 paragraphs. The first paragraph indicated that 3 it was taking its action pursuant to Article V,
4 Section 10.

5                       The first numbered paragraph said
6 that it was suspending permanently that portion 7 of the Act of November 17, 1996, with the 8 particular subsections listed which we know to 9 be CURA.

10                      It then suspended permanently several 11 portions of PCRA which made reference to 12 unitary review, so just for consistency
13 purposes. It then suspended the 1995 and 1997 14 amendments to Section 9546(d) of the PCRA which 15 was the provision that this body had amended to 16 limit the right of direct appeal from denials
17 of PCRA and substituting for that a provision 18 for petitions for allowance of appeal.

19                      I guess what the effect of that was, 20 it left the system in place as it was before 21 the 1995 amendment, although quite frankly, I 22 received an order in the mail today or 23 yesterday that transferred a capital case from 24 the Supreme Court and its capital appeals
25 docket to the Superior Court. I don't know

1           what that did.

2                       The next paragraph, as I recall, 3           noted that there were rules attached to the 4           order and they were the rules amending the 5           Chapter 1500 of the Rules of Criminal Procedure
6           which implement the PCRA, including, adding a 7           few subsections and one full section dealing 8           specifically with post-appeal collateral
9           review, normal PCRA petitions but in capital 10          cases; setting time limits and things of that 11          sort. Quite frankly, drawing the time limits
12          that were found in CURA, but flipping the thing 13          over from pre-appeal collateral review to 14          post-appeal.

15                      They said, since the Criminal Rules
16          Committee had prepublished its proposal in May 17          of 1996, we don't have to prepublish under the 18          rules of judicial administration. We'll just 19          adopt these. Well, as we stated both in the 20          petitions to the court asking them to 21          reconsider their wholesale suspension of CURA, 22          as well as in the testimony I gave this 23          morning, its disingenuous to look back to that 24          action of the Criminal Procedural Rules
25          Committee.

1 I served on the Criminal Procedural
2 Rules Committee for better than six years. The 3 process was, when the Rules Committee would 4 propose a rule, before it would be submitted to 5 the Supreme Court for its consideration, it
6 would be published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin
7 and in the Atlantic Reporter to get comment
8 from the Bench and Bar. We frequently got 9 comment, and frequently it made us change what 10 we had initially published. Then and only 11 then, after the committee reconsidered what it 12 would do, would we send the proposal onto the 13 court.

14 In May of 1996, there was a proposal
15 to amend the PCRA rules, and that was 16 published, to bring it into conformity with the 17 changes that the legislature had adopted in 18 November of 1995. But the committee's 19 explanatory comment said, we're not dealing 20 with CURA. These provisions only apply to 21 PCRA. Now, 14 months later, and I see the 22 Attorney General has arrived, and I'll finish
23 my answer and then I'll ask him to -- I'll ask 24 him to join me anyway. They said they weren't 25 dealing with CURA. Now, 16 months after the

1 fact, without any forewarning to the Bench and 2 Bar at large, they suspend CURA. The last 3 thing they did, they had attached to their 4 order the new rules that they were 5 promulgating. I would be happy to send you a 6 copy of the order.

7 REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: The time
8 frame sets up a whole interesting scenario from 9 my point of view. I'm wondering who was 10 preemptively striking who in this scenario that 11 you set up. Have the recommendations already 12 been adopted as rules? I know they have not.
13 My question is, had they already been adopted 14 as rules when CURA was enacted, would we then 15 have enacted a law that was indirect -- that 16 would make that whole argument we've been 17 hearing this morning about whether there was a 18 specific rule that this did or didn't 19 contradict, would that have made that argument 20 different?

21 MR. GRACI: I believe no.

22 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Can I interrupt
23 just for a second? I want to recognize 24 Attorney General Fisher who has now joined us.
25 He can chime in on the answer.

1                   ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: I will try 2 to interject. I apologize for not being able 3 to be here at the scheduled time. I was in 4 Commonwealth Court arguing the validity of the 5 constitutional question on next Tuesday's 6 ballot to amend the Pardon's Board. We 7 just finished that argument. Obviously, Bob 8 Graci, who is the Executive Deputy Attorney 9 General in charge of our Legal Appeals Review 10 Section is here in my place. He is very ably 11 addressing the issues on CURA and the issues 12 before this committee. I thank you for 13 allowing us. I'll turn it back to Bob.

14                   MR. GRACI: Thank you, General.

15                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
16 General.

17                   MR. GRACI: Representative Manderino,
18 the answer to the question would be no. If I 19 understand the question correctly, if the rules 20 that were promulgated on August 11 were in 21 existence, could this body have adopted CURA?
22 My answer would be yes, because CURA brought to 23 the jurisprudence of the Commonwealth the 24 concept of pre-appeal collateral review. None
25 of the rules promulgated has anything to do

1 with pre-appeal collateral review.

2 That's one of the several points made
3 in Attorney General Fisher's petition asking 4 the Supreme Court to reconsider its rules. We 5 stated in that petition, as I stated in the 6 testimony today, and I go back to something 7 Senator Piccola said. If you adopted CURA as 8 you did and said an answer has to be filled in 9 10 days and the Supreme Court came along and 10 said, we're going to adopt rules to implement 11 CURA but we are going to say 20 days, then to 12 the extent that 10 days is inconsistent with 20 13 days, 10 days is suspended. But, they didn't 14 do that. They made no attempt to give effect
15 to the will of this body that we telescope down 16 the amount of time that these cases take and 17 that we have an effective death penalty.

18 Again, I know when he was in the 19 Senate the Attorney General argued forcefully 20 that we are not eliminating any rights of 21 review. We are just consolidating these 22 things. We are not taking away any issues from 23 defendants, but it has to be done. The death
24 penalty in this Commonwealth is a laughing 25 matter because they are never carried out. We

1 have cases go on for years and years and years, 2 frustrating the will of this body and 3 frustrating the will of the people who you
4 represent, because we know that these people
5 have been sentenced to death. We know that 6 victims, families are waiting for lawfully 7 imposed sentences to be executed, but time and 8 time again we have to say no, not yet. It's 9 still in the courts. That was what CURA was 10 designed to do.

11 All the Supreme Court had to do and 12 what the Attorney General has asked them to do 13 is adopt procedures that give effect to the new 14 procedure that you said shall be the law of 15 this Commonwealth. If they want to tinker with 16 the numbers, so be it, but they shouldn't be 17 tinkering with the whole idea. That's what 18 their wholesale suspension does.

19 REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Getting 20 the time frame right, the unitary review, CURA 21 was passed even prior to this committee that 22 was meeting for the Supreme Court on rules with 23 regard to post-conviction? CURA was already in 24 existence as a law prior to that committee 25 coming out with any kind of rules regardless of 1           whether they apply pre- or post-conviction?

2                   MR. GRACI: Absolutely. If you look 3           at that, and I have it cited in the testimony.
4           If you look at that Pennsylvania Bulletin
5           provision, it's clear that they were thinking 6           about amendments to PCRA because this body had 7           just amended PCRA, and it's further clear that 8           they sidestepped the question of whether or not 9           to promulgate rules to implement CURA when they 10          said, we're adopting these rules only to 11          implement the changes wrought by the amendments
12          to PCRA and not to deal with CURA.

13                   REPRESENTATIVE MANDERINO: Thank you.
14          Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

15                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Representative
16          Reber.

17                   REPRESENTATIVE REBER: Thank you, Mr.
18          Chairman. Good afternoon, Attorney General
19          Fisher. I almost said Senator. Mr. Graci, I 20          appreciate the historical perspective you put 21          in the testimony earlier on. It's that 22          particular arena I'd like to go and ask you for 23          some insight. If there is any hard empirical 24          data, that would be interesting to me.

25                   My concern is the grant of 1 ruling-making power as you stated was added in 2 the Constitution as we know it in the '68

3 Constitutional Convention. Then we had the 4 time frame from '68 back until '37, or I should 5 say '37 to '68 where the analogous rule-making 6 power was done vis-a-vis statute. Is that a 7 correct statement?

8 MR. GRACI: Yes, sir.

9 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: Are you aware 10 or have you categorized the types of orders 11 that were emanated from '37 until '68 by the 12 court under that type of authority? And what 13 degrees, if you can capsulize or summarize, 14 what were the degrees of action taken by the 15 court in their suspension orders? Didn't we 16 have forms of wholesale statutory, emasculation 17 as we have been seeing, at least has been 18 alleged by some people, recently? I think 19 that's very important.

20 Then with that being said, I'd like 21 to go back from William Penn, et al. up until 22 1937, if there was any kind of countervailing
23 rule-making authority that was used.

24 It seems to me, and I have been on 25 this committee for 18 years, my full 18 years

1 in the General Assembly. I've always been one 2 to be rather resistive of constitutional
3 amendment changes that come before the House
4 and certainly before this committee. I really 5 really tread down that path with great
6 intrepidation because it's just so sacrosanct 7 in my mind. This, though, has taken new 8 heights.

9 I think some of this historical 10 perspective to, in essence, capsulize and 11 highlight how we have seen such emasculation 12 would be very helpful to me if in fact we have 13 the background precedence to substantiate it.
14 That's a long-winded question. I hope you 15 understand where I'm going.

16 MR. GRACI: I think I do,
17 Representative, and I'll try to answer it. I 18 have in front of me the orders entered in 1968
19 by both the Supreme Court and the Superior 20 Court. The 1957 statute said that the Supreme 21 and Superior Courts had dual authority to 22 promulgate rules of criminal procedure, which 23 certainly is unusual as we think about it 24 today.

25 In 1968, and I reference this in my

1 testimony, the President Judge of the Superior 2 Court and the Chief Justice of the Supreme 3 Court issued an order promulgating, among other
4 things, rules to give effect to the 1966
5 adoption of the PCRA. It set forth they were 6 doing exactly that by the power granted to them
7 by the 1957 statute.

8 One of the rules, the last rule, 1507
9 is entitled "Suspension of Acts of Assembly".
10 It says, the Act of January 25, 1966, which was 11 PCHA, is hereby suspended insofar as it is 12 inconsistent with the rules. This is done in 13 accordance with the provisions of Section 1 of 14 the Act of July 11, 1957. They were very 15 cognizant of their authority that it derived 16 from a legislative enactment and they only did 17 it -- There was a note that was part of the 18 rules as adopted, a note to Rule 1506 that said
19 Rules 1501 through 1506 implement the PCHA.

20 So they understood, it seemed to me, 21 the limits of their authority and that their 22 authority at that time was not something that 23 came full-blown from the common law. You
24 reference going back to the founder, Mr. Penn.
25 It was something that was given to them only

1           ten years earlier in the criminal field by the 2           legislature. It doesn't have any long 3           historical genesis.

4                     It seemed to me they were conscious
5           of -- They weren't getting rid of PCHA. As I 6           mentioned, later on, I think it was 1982, when 7           PCHA was to be repealed after a long process as 8           part of the codification of the judicial code, 9           the Rules Committee, and I quoted a passage
10          from their view, that there really wasn't a lot 11          of inconsistency, and what they were basically 12          doing was implementing and supplementing the 13          procedures that the legislature had divined in 14          adopting PCHA.

15                    There seemed to be a blended -- 16          recognizing that the legislature had some 17          opportunity, at least to define the general 18          context of the proceeding, but leaving it to 19          the court to come up with the minutia, if you 20          will.

21                    One of the things that came to mind
22          as you asked the question was their provision 23          with respect to the appointment of counsel.
24          Under PCHA, before counsel was to be appointed 25          for a PCHA petitioner, the court was to examine

1 the petition to determine whether or not it was 2 wholly frivolous. If the court determined it 3 was wholly frivolous, that was to be the end of 4 it and it was to be dismissed. The Supreme 5 Court adopted a rule which it subsequently in 6 some case laws, and I have those cases if you
7 are interested, broaden the right to counsel.
8 They basically said by rule, if the petitioner 9 satisfies the court that he's unable to procure 10 counsel, the court shall appoint counsel to 11 them.

12 They interpreted that rule as taking 13 away from the court the idea that you're 14 suppose to determine frivolousness first. They 15 expanded, and one might say, quite frankly I 16 believe, that that rule enlarged the 17 substantive rights of a criminal defendant, 18 petitioner in PCHA hearings, and probably was 19 in excess of their authority back then. Nobody 20 has complained about it. I'm not suggesting we 21 shouldn't have counsel for these things.

22 Certainly we should have them in capital cases.

23 As a matter of fact, if I might 24 digress a moment, the witness immediately
25 before me, Mr. Epstein, had referenced a

1 petition had been filled with the court to do
2 away with CURA. Last year we filed an answer
3 to that petition in the form of a brief setting 4 forth all the reasons why--when I say we, the 5 Office of Attorney General--the statute was 6 constitutional. One of the points we made was, 7 as it related to the provision that you wrote
8 into CURA asking the Supreme Court to adopt 9 counsel standards. Here you have the 10 legislature clearly defining a right to counsel 11 in post-conviction proceedings in capital
12 cases, and saying to the Supreme Court we don't 13 want ineffective lawyers handling these cases 14 develop standards.

15 That was one of the prime -- Now, 16 consider this. This was a challenge brought by 17 the defense bar, the people who represent 18 capital defendants, saying that this exceeded 19 the legislature's authority. It seems to me to 20 be a salutary thing for the legislature to do, 21 to say we're going to have counsel in all of 22 these proceedings from trial through post-
23 conviction proceedings as we know them in CURA, 24 and we ask you, the Supreme Court, to look at 25 the background of these lawyers and set

1 experience standards and things of that sort,
2 but they said that that was an unconstitutional
3 exercise by this body.

4 Quite frankly, as it presently exists,
5 there's is no statutory basis; and therefore, I 6 think no constitutional basis for the Supreme 7 Court to dictate by rule that everybody who 8 files a PCRA petition, no matter how meritless 9 or frivolous has a right to counsel. That 10 issue is pending as we speak before the courts.

11 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: Let me again
12 go back, and putting aside the example, PCHA 13 and PCRA that you have been alluding to,
14 Senator Piccola talked about what he termed 15 nullification, statutory nullification and 16 actions by the court, wholesale and garnishment 17 cases, med-mal cases and death penalty cases.

18 Going back again to my time frame
19 that I talked about, are you familiar with any 20 other topical areas similar to those where 21 there was wholesale action taken by the court
22 under this authority pre-1968 to '37, or '37 23 back until the time of --

24 MR. GRACI: Pre-1968, Representative,
25 I am not; certainly since, and I thought that's

1 where Judge Woodside's comments were 2 particularly telling. He recognized this as a 3 problem 12 years ago when he wrote. The 4 problem I think has exacerbated on the criminal 5 side. I've looked at District Attorney
6 Rebert's testimony from last week or the week
7 before. He cataloged some of them; the right 8 to jury trial.

9 Now, that arose in the context of a 10 case. It wasn't that they just came along and 11 said we're suspending, but there are other 12 examples in the modern era where they just 13 issued an order suspending a statute as being 14 inconsistent with a rule.

15 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: The reason I'm 16 going in this direction, Woodside quotations 17 were somewhat emblematic to me because of the 18 date when they were made. There seems to be a 19 feeling in some of the testimony that this is a 20 rather recent phenomenon of the current cast of 21 characters sitting on the bench, if you will, 22 on the high bench. The Woodside comment would 23 tend not to suggest that to be the case; that 24 it had been there in other various forms and 25 degrees. It's that historical perspective that

1 I'm trying to really develop in my own mind for 2 the necessary remedial language, if some is 3 necessary, in the form of a constitutional 4 amendment to rectify it.

5 MR. GRACI: In the commentary I cited
6 the language in the Supreme Court's opinion in 7 the Laudenberger case. Quite frankly, that is 8 referenced in Judge Woodside's treatise.

9 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: That was the 10 Roberts' dissenting opinion?

11 MR. GRACI: The majority and the 12 dissent. It was the majority that said, we 13 recognize that some of our procedural rules may 14 have an impact on substantive law, but that's 15 okay. If that's true, and as the dissenter, as 16 Justice Roberts properly pointed out; if that's 17 true, then it's likewise true that you're going 18 to adopt policies, and in order to have an 19 effective death penalty sandwiching down the 20 time is an important aspect. You have to have 21 the ability to be able to say that it's an 22 important aspect. Otherwise, these things go 23 on interminably.

24 ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: If I could 25 in response to Representative Reber's question,

1 historically, I remember it was probably around 2 1981, it was shortly after I was elected to the 3 Senate, after serving in this body, that there 4 was a judicial council that had been part of 5 the judiciary article. I believe the last 6 actual meeting of the judicial council was in 7 the early '80's. I was asked to attend that 8 meeting of the judicial council by the then 9 Chairman of the Senator Judiciary Committee
10 Senator Snyder.

11 One of the controversies that 12 attended at that time and has begun to brew 13 from the late '70's was, what was perceived to 14 be an intrusion by the court into the 15 legislative arena. Representative Reber, you 16 have been here during that almost same period 17 of time, over a period of 18 years. I think 18 the intrusion has slowly grown over the 18 to 19 20-year period.

20 But, I know of no situation, and 21 that's why I felt so strongly in CURA, not only 22 as a previous sponsor of that act in the Senate
23 but also when I was the Attorney General. I 24 know of no other situation analogous to this 25 where the court went out and suspended a law

1 where they had no rules. It was one thing to 2 argue procedure versus substance, and procedure
3 versus substance was an ongoing debate. I sat 4 as a member in the late '70's and once again in 5 the early '80's as a member of the court's 6 Criminal Procedural Rules Committee, as has Mr.
7 Graci in the past. That was also an ongoing
8 debate. Sometimes the legislature encroached
9 across the line.

10 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: Like in 11 med-mal there's discovery, and in garnishment 12 there execution of the rules, so there's at 13 least some nexus on those situations.

14 ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: There's a 15 debate, and that's probably a healthy debate
16 that goes on. I don't think in and of itself 17 those kind of debates are reasons to change the 18 Constitution, but it does concern me.

19 As I say, that's why we felt so
20 strongly and filed the petition which we did, 21 which is an extraordinary petition to be filed, 22 asserting that they made a mistake in their 23 rule-making power by suspending CURA and 24 leaving the void which CURA tried to cure.

25 So, I would hope, one, that this

1           isn't a trend, but if you look at history it
2           does appear to be a trend. It's a disturbing
3           trend that's getting wider. I would hope that 4           we can get a resolution on the CURA issue as a 5           result of our petition, but there's no 6           certainty of that.

7                       Honestly, I'm filing it as the 8           Attorney General. I'm hopeful -- I believe the 9           district attorneys continue to have some 10          interest in that. But, I'm not sure that we 11          have -- We can't come to you and say, repass 12          CURA because the current attitude of the 13          Supreme Court wouldn't do any good. We're 14          stuck. It's a trend that concerns me and I 15          know that's why you are having these hearings.

16                      MR. GRACI: Mr. Reber, if I might add 17          one final note on the historical perspective.
18          It was something that came up during the 19          testimony of one of the earlier witnesses.
20          That had to do with the process by which the 21          rules were adopted or should be adopted.

22                      Back in 1978 there was what the 23          Supreme Court referred to as a letter of 24          address. The legislature had adopted Section 25          1703 of the judicial code which purported to

1           require the Supreme Court when acting in its 2           rule-making authority to hold open meetings, 3           the same as any other legislative body has to 4           do.

5                         The Supreme Court wrote a letter to 6           the Governor, who obviously signed the bill to 7           make it law to the President Pro Tempore and 8           the Speaker of the House, signed by all the 9           members of the Supreme Court saying no. You
10          can't tell us -- Our rule-making authority 11          derives from the Constitution. It's a judicial 12          function as set forth in Article V, 13          specifically Section 10(c) and you can't tell 14          us under penalties generally applicable to the 15          Open Meeting Law, Sunshine Law, that we have to 16          promulgate rules in any particular fashion.

17                        That was another instance I wanted to 18          use historically to show that without anything 19          pending before them, and certainly none of them
20          have been arrested for violating the Sunshine
21          Law, they said we're not going to follow it.
22          We're going to suspend it as it applies to us,
23          but that gets to the question of, how can you 24          curb, if at all, if you wish to, the rule-25          making authority? If they're deriving that

1 authority from the Constitution, you can't pass
2 a statute that says follow this procedure
3 because that's been tried once. They've said
4 no. I hope that adds to the --

5 REPRESENTATIVE REBER: It does.

6 Thank you very much.

7 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you,
8 Representative Reber. Mr. Andring.

9 MR. ANDRING: Just one question.
10 There were two pieces of legislation circulated
11 today, Senate Bill 779 and Senate Bill 1045,
12 each of which proposes a rather limited 13 amendment to the existing language of
14 Article V, Section 10 of the Pennsylvania
15 Constitution. Is my understanding correct that 16 you don't believe that these amendments would 17 be sufficient to correct the problems as you 18 perceive it?

19 In fact, the Office of Attorney
20 General is advocating the complete repeal of 21 Article V, Section 10 of the Pennsylvania
22 Constitution to be replaced by the language 23 contained in the testimony that the Supreme 24 Court shall exercise such powers and perform 25 such duties as may be imposed by the law?

1 MR. GRACI: The language we propose,
2 the very simple statement we believe puts the 3 rule-making authority back to where it was 4 before the 1968 amendment to the Constitution.
5 I have not examined in great detail, although I
6 have read them, 779 and 1046, which seem to me 7 have to be -- they have to dovetail. Certainly 8 to adopt 1046 without a constitutional
9 amendment --

10 Quite frankly, I don't know why
11 Sections 505 and 1722 are in the judicial code 12 because all they do is reiterate what's in the 13 Constitution, and that portion of the 14 Constitution, as I read it, and certainly as 15 the Supreme Court has interpreted, it doesn't 16 need legislation to make it effective.

17 The provision in what would be the 18 resolution to amend the Constitution would be 19 similar in -- We didn't propose putting it in 20 the Constitution, but part of the Attorney
21 General's testimony would suggest the adoption
22 of the federal model where the Supreme Court 23 has committees and the Supreme Court proposes 24 rules and the Congress has -- I forget how many 25 months. I have the statute with me, but they

1           have so many months to review it. If they 2           don't do anything, it would become the law;
3           become a rule, or they could tinker with it;
4           or, as I mention in the habeas corpus rules 5           last year, they could actually write them if 6           they want. This is a little bit more I think 7           of a limitation than what the Attorney General 8           proposed, but I think they could go hand in 9           hand.

10                   MR. ANDRING: Just to clarify then, 11           it is correct that the Attorney General is 12           essentially proposing rather than a modifi-
13           cation of Article V, Section 10, a complete 14           repeal of Article V, Section 10 and the 15           establishment of essentially the federal type 16           system relating to the jurisdiction powers of 17           the Appellate Courts?

18                   ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: That's 19           correct.

20                   MR. ANDRING: Is that a fair 21           statement?

22                   ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: That's 23           correct.

24                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you, Mr.
25           Andring. Mr. Preski.

1 MR. PRESKI: One question. Attorney
2 General Fisher, you referred to--Mr. Graci
3 might have answered this--that you're concerned 4 that we might be seeing a trend here with the 5 Supreme Court that they've started very 6 gradually and moved on and on. We have a
7 proposed evidence code that the Supreme Court 8 is now promulgating.

9 Do you see or do you have any 10 thoughts about the evidence code which had been 11 the creature of legislation from what I 12 understand to be many years sponsored by 13 Senator Greenleaf in the Senate to the point 14 now that we are about to have an evidence code 15 created not by the legislature at all, but 16 purely by court rule? Do you have any thoughts 17 about that?

18 ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: There was 19 always a question as to whether rules of 20 evidence were substantive or procedural.
21 Unfortunately, under our current constitutional
22 makeup, it doesn't matter what the General 23 Assembly felt. If the court felt it was 24 procedural, the court was going to be able to 25 suspend what the General Assembly put in place

1 and adopt their own.

2 It's a close call. It's a call that 3 I was part of in some of the debate when the 4 bill was in the Senate a few years ago. I
5 think the important thing is, we'd like to see 6 a code before, get on the books somehow.

7 MR. PRESKI: Thank you.

8 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Just a question.
9 It seems to me from the gist of the questions
10 and the testimony, and I think Mr. Preski 11 touched on this, prior to the constitutional 12 amendment it seemed the court periodically
13 would work on the edges of what we call 14 substantive law. It seemed people would take a 15 look at it and say, what they did wasn't a bad
16 idea and it's really not coming too far. It 17 doesn't seem to bother anybody that much.

18 But, there really wasn't any 19 evisceration of any statutes that had been in 20 place wholesale. Then subsequent to 1968, and 21 now where we are today where we saw that they 22 didn't have any rules in place, and then 23 peremptorily suspended an entire statute
24 presenting that it violated the rule-making 25 statute. That's purely what I'm seeing that

1 perhaps prior to '68 because it was a statute
2 enacted by the General Assembly and signed by 3 the Governor and I think that's always an 4 important consideration. This isn't all done
5 in a vacuum. The Governor looks at everything
6 we pass. He has the right to veto it or sign 7 it into law. He has his legal scholars take a 8 look at it and determine whether or not they 9 feel it's constitutional or unconstitutional.

10 It seems to me that a lot of this 11 happened, prior to that when it was by statute, 12 seemed to be a sense from the testimony and 13 questions that the court would say no, if we go 14 too far the legislature can always come in and 15 take a look at this and could amend that 16 statute or change that statute in some way to 17 affect what we did. Whereas, subsequent to '68 18 with it being an constitutional enactment, that 19 the court -- not only do they make the rules, 20 but they determine the definition of a rule.
21 It seems to me that definition is continually 22 expanding from what they said.

23 That brings me to a question. These 24 statutes that were referenced in your testimony
25 you make a note they are repealed. Do you know

1           whether or not they were specifically repealed
2           or repealed by the adoption of the '68
3           constitutional amendment?

4                   MR. GRACI:  No.  They were repealed, 5           if I recall, Mr. Chairman, with the adoption of 6           the judicial code and the Judicial Act Repealer
7           Act.

8                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON:  Then my 9           question --

10                   MR. GRACI:  Title 19 of what used to 11           be Purdon's Statute was entitled "Criminal 12           Procedure".  Title 17 was "Civil Procedure".
13           It was in those statutes -- Actually, both of 14           those acts were found in Title 17.  Those were 15           wholesale repealed in 1976 or '78 with the 16           adoption of the judicial code.

17                   CHAIRPERSON GANNON:  If the people of 18           Pennsylvania in their wisdom decided to repeal
19           that section of the Constitution that grants 20           this exclusive authority to the court to make 21           their own rules and replace it with language
22           that's suggested in this article by Mr.
23           Ledewitz, we would have to reenact a statute, 24           or I guess replace the statutes that would give 25           it rule-making authority.

1 MR. GRACI: Or you would have to 2 reenact Title 17 and 19 and adopt rules. The 3 idea, if I might, Mr. Chairman, and I think 4 when you look at the way the Constitution 5 particularly now is constructed and the 6 extreme -- the legislative authority is in the 7 General Assembly and executive authority in the 8 Governor and judicial authority in the Supreme 9 Court, you can adopt rules for how you conduct 10 your proceedings here in the House, how you 11 consider bills and all those kind of things.

12 It was Judge Woodside as a member of 13 the Constitutional Convention that proposed 14 giving the Supreme Court constitutional rule-15 making authority as it existed in the statutes.
16 That makes sense if you are talking about 17 actual procedure; you know, should something 18 about by a petition or should it by rule to 19 show cause? Should it be by a motion? Should 20 we have answers? What times should --

21 Those things nobody here should be 22 overly concerned about. That's regulating
23 what's goes on in the court. But, defining a 24 right and ultimately defining what is a rule 25 and what's procedure and what substantive is, I

1 think belongs with the popularly-elected body
2 and not with the court.

3 As I said at the conclusion of my 4 testimony, right now if they say it's a rule, 5 it's a rule and you can't do anything about it.
6 The comment that the Attorney General made, if 7 I can just to expand upon the evidence code
8 thing, I don't know as Mr. Epstein said is that 9 substantive or procedural. I remember that 10 debate going back when I was in law school and 11 nobody tried to resolve it then.

12 Look at the statutes right now. In 13 Title 42 there's a section that's called code 14 of evidence, all of the privileges and 15 immunities. One that's particularly important 16 in the business we're in, the privilege against 17 self-incrimination, which is obviously a 18 constitutional dimension, but the statutory 19 authority for either the Attorney General or a 20 district attorney to seek an order of immunity, 21 that's set forth in a statute. The Supreme 22 Court has said that that statute is 23 constitutional. The Supreme Court has said 24 that it's a matter within the discretion of the 25 Attorney General. That's part of that code of 1 evidence. Is that not going to be good

2 anymore?

3           You've done a lot of things, things 4 like the business records exception; a lot of 5 exceptions to the hearsay rules are 6 legislatively adopted and have met with 7 approval in the courts. Now all of a sudden 8 we're looking at a thing that's about this 9 thick (demonstrating) that they're calling not 10 a code of evidence as it was called when it was 11 in the legislature, but now the rules of 12 evidence, and I think they're called rules for 13 a reason in what has been published. The 14 Attorney General's proposal would put the power 15 where it should be, with the representatives of 16 the people.

17           CHAIRPERSON GANNON: It just seems to 18 me, prior to '68 everybody knew what was 19 procedural and what was substantive and maybe a 20 little bit of wiggle room. Now all of a sudden 21 nobody knows what's substantive, what's 22 procedural, and we've got ourselves in a 23 situation where we see a statute being 24 essentially declared unconstitutional without 25 anybody having an opportunity to petition or

1 have a hearing or --

2 ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: And without 3 any substantive rules.

4 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: -- or 5 substantive rules. I thank you very much, 6 Attorney General Fisher, and Mr. Graci for your 7 testimony today.

8 ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: I would 9 like to indicate to the committee, as you can 10 see, Mr. Graci is probably one of our premiere 11 experts in this Commonwealth on this entire 12 issue. Mr. Graci certainly is willing to help 13 this committee and any members of the committee 14 as you move forward on this issue. He 15 certainly is a resource for the General
16 Assembly to use.

17 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: I'm glad you
18 spoke, Attorney General, because you are an 19 elected official, elected statewide, and you 20 have come here voluntarily to present your 21 position on this very important issue. I would 22 extend an invitation to every member of the 23 Supreme Court or a member that they would 24 designate that they would come down and met 25 with this panel and present their views on this

1 very important issue, either separately or 2 however they see fit. I would be willing to 3 reconvene the committee at anytime convenient 4 to the court or the members of the court or a 5 member of the court who wish to come down and 6 address us and discuss this with us in a very 7 friendly fashion so we can get a better
8 understanding how the court views its authority
9 today under this Constitution as written now.
10 Thank you very much.

11 ATTORNEY GENERAL FISHER: Thank you,
12 Mr. Chairman.

13 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Our next witness
14 is Larry Frankel with the American Civil 15 Liberties Union of Pennsylvania. I think we'll 16 take a five-minute recess for the stenographer.

17 (Recess occurred)

18 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Mr. Frankel, you
19 may proceed.

20 MR. FRANKEL: Thank you, Chairman
21 Gannon, Subcommittee Chairman Clark, and 22 Representative Manderino for hanging in there 23 this long. My name is Larry Frankel. I'm the 24 Executive Director of American Civil Liberties
25 Union of Pennsylvania. I do not have written

1 testimony. I don't know if I should or should 2 not apologize for that. I do not have written 3 testimony. I thought better that I listen to 4 some of what I heard today and offer some of my 5 own reflections of what I heard, as well as 6 provide you with some information on a few
7 suggestions that I came across in some reading 8 I did with relevance to the testimony and the 9 subject matter here today.

10 I feel like we're reliving history
11 almost. It seems that you go back and look 12 throughout American history, and I think 13 Representative Caltagirone referred to this 14 earlier. There's been a consistent tension 15 between the branches of government, whether 16 it's between the legislative and the executive, 17 the legislative and the judiciary, the 18 executive and the judiciary. A hallmark of our 19 history and our form of government is a certain 20 amount of tension between those branches 21 because that accounts for the checks and 22 balances which I would submit have served this 23 country very well.

24 I think almost every other country in 25 the world envies the stability of our

1 government and its ability to function and 2 respond and make change normally, without 3 violence; normally through an orderly process, 4 and the system of checks and balances has 5 served us well in that regard. The system of 6 separation of powers has also served us well.
7 I think those are the issues that really are at 8 the heart of what is at stake here.

9 How do we maintain a separation of 10 powers? How do we maintain the checks and 11 balances? Certainly, the legislature does have 12 the right to inquire whether the judiciary has 13 intruded into the legislative arena, just as 14 the judiciary has the right to tell the 15 legislature you cannot intrude into the arena 16 which the judiciary has control of. This is 17 historical. It's not new. It's not novel.
18 There may be one or two recent instances that 19 have caused it to reappear on the radar screen
20 here in Pennsylvania.

21 I would be interested myself to ask
22 one of my board members if he has information
23 about what Representative Reber was asking,
24 what's the history in Pennsylvania? How often 25 have laws been struck down both under the 1968

1 constitutional provision, the prior statutory 2 provision, and what occurred even prior to the 3 statutory provision? There may be some 4 historical context here in Pennsylvania.
5 Certainly there is in this country with regard 6 to the U.S. Supreme Court periods where there's 7 been great tension between the legislative and 8 executive branches and the courts.

9 In most instances we weathered those 10 storms without need for drastically changing 11 our form of government. We've had a system 12 that has indeed worked.

13 I think about Pennsylvania, and if I
14 recall correctly, we have the oldest state
15 Supreme Court in the country. To all of a 16 sudden believe that the court is out of control
17 or something is mistaken in the wholesale
18 manner about what they're doing I think is a 19 disservice to the history of that court, which 20 has been here even longer than the U.S. Supreme 21 Court.

22 Although the Constitution has been 23 revised, we have one of the oldest established 24 set of rights for individuals in this country.
25 In fact, portions of the Bill of Rights were

1           fashioned upon provisions that existed in the 2           Constitution of Pennsylvania that was in effect
3           at the time the Bill of Rights was adopted. I
4           think we have some great historical precedent
5           here in Pennsylvania that we should pay 6           attention to.

7                        I believe the lessons from 8           Pennsylvania were well-heeded by the founders 9           of the republic. Interestingly enough, I was 10          reading some of the Federalist Papers myself.
11          I guess this hearing has caused some of us to 12          read or reread some of the important documents.

13                       District Attorney Morganelli referred 14          to the Federalist Paper Number 78 which, in 15          essence, was the argument for life tenure for 16          federal judges. Like some of the questions 17          about term limits, the Federalist system has 18          life tenure, and there was an argument about 19          why to make those judges be able to serve for 20          life, and that was to preserve their 21          independence.

22                       Interestingly enough, and I don't 23          think it was intentional on Mr. Morganelli's 24          part, but he left out what I found to be one of 25          the most telling passages of the Federalist

1 Paper Number 78 in referring to the judiciary
2 and the importance of the judiciary. I'll read
3 what we believe Alexander Hamilton wrote about 4 the judiciary. In the republic it is a no less 5 excellent barrier to the encroachment and 6 oppression of the representative body, and it 7 is the best expedient which can be devised in 8 any government to secure a steady, upright and 9 impartial administration of the laws. That's 10 what the judiciary does. You ask the 11 legislature to make the policy, but the 12 judiciary in its turn make sure that there's an 13 impartial administration of the laws.

14 Justice Marshall way back in Marberry
15 versus Manson established the right and the 16 authority of the courts to review statutes to 17 make sure that it complied with the 18 Constitution. I only refer to the Federalist
19 Papers and Justice Marshall to again impress 20 upon this committee and any members of the 21 public that may tune in to watch the proceeding 22 that we are talking about concepts that have 23 great historical precedent, and again, have 24 served our country well; not that it always 25 worked one hundred percent perfectly.

1                   We did fight a Civil War in this 2                   country, but I think if you look at societies 3                   and governments throughout the world over the 4                   last 200 plus years, it would be hard to find 5                   one that functioned as well as ours did, and 6                   the judiciary authority is very important in 7                   that regard.

8                   And again, not to say there haven't 9                   been times of great tension between other 10                  branches of government and the judiciary. Back 11                  when Franklin Roosevelt was President, the, 12                  quote unquote, liberals were complaining about 13                  judicial activism, and Franklin Roosevelt 14                  suggested that he be allowed to pack the court.
15                  Fortunately his plan did not succeed. The 16                  judiciary survived.

17                  The question of whether one or two 18                  judges might have felt intimidated by President 19                  Roosevelt, there's a phrase about the switch in 20                  time saves nine, but that is another historical 21                  antecedent. There was much concern during the 22                  latter years of the Warren court about whether 23                  that court went too far. This time it was, 24                  quote unquote, conservatives complaining about 25                  an activist court. Again, there is some

1 history to what I see going on.

2 Just this last term of the U.S.
3 Supreme Court they struck down four laws duly 4 passed by Congress, which was the most federal 5 legislation that had been stricken down by the 6 Supreme Court in many years. In many cases one 7 would say that the conservative justices were 8 the activist because, at least in two or three 9 of those cases they found that the state's 10 rights were being violated by the Congress and 11 too much power was being given away. This give 12 and take and tug between the courts and the 13 legislative branch has been part of our 14 history. We can solve this problem without 15 amending the Constitution.

16 In that light I'd like to make a 17 couple of suggestions based on the reading that 18 I have done. One of them follows through on 19 what we've heard today. That is setting up 20 some kind of mechanism, whereby, there is some 21 dialogue between this body and the court. I'm 22 not sure how to implement that. I'm not sure 23 what restrictions the court may feel. I'm not 24 sure what restrictions, whether they be legal 25 or political, the legislature may feel.

1           I will provide committee staff after 2           I get back to my office a copy of two law
3           review articles which talk about setting up 4           some type of formal or informal mechanism for 5           state legislatures and state courts to 6           communicate with each other, not only about 7           constitutional questions, but questions of 8           statutory interpretation. Sometimes the court 9           maybe can learn more about the legislature's 10          intent and process and how it arrived at its 11          statutes. Sometimes those statutes are 12          purposely ambiguous and will require 13          interpretation by the court, and similarly, the 14          court can let the legislature know a little bit 15          more about how it works and what it thinks.

16           I certainly want to see an 17          independent judiciary, and the ACLU itself is 18          quite cognizant that it's usually the courts
19          that are the best protectors of individual 20          freedoms and liberties, but that doesn't mean 21          the court doesn't have an obligation to explain 22          what it does and try and educate not just the 23          legislature but members of the public when it 24          takes action.

25           The other suggestion I have is to

1 remind people who disagree with court action
2 that sometimes they need to bring another case 3 and make a better argument. Certainly, the 4 Attorney General is trying to do that with his 5 petition to the court on the Capital Unitary 6 Review Act. Go back to the court. Try and 7 make a better argument. Try to convince them
8 why they were wrong. Don't threaten them with 9 impeachment. You don't need to threaten them 10 with a constitutional amendment.

11 There's many areas of the law that 12 the ACLU has been involved with when it didn't 13 win the first case, but somehow we rethought
14 the issues, rethought the approach, maybe had a 15 better set of facts, maybe found a better 16 lawyer and were able to go back to court and 17 obtain a change. We don't have to rely on 18 threats to the court or the cumbersome
19 amendment process with its unknown consequences
20 to necessarily affect the change. Perhaps a 21 little dialogue with the court rather than a 22 hectoring of the court would be appropriate.

23 I believe that this legislative body
24 does want to comply with the Constitution, and 25 the court is there to make sure the

1 Constitution is complied with. Maybe further
2 discussion in a more reasoned atmosphere
3 without some of the -- and I'm not implying
4 anything here today, other than the word
5 impeachment being tossed around I think rather 6 improperly. But the kind of dialogue and 7 discussion which can be engaged in by people 8 who want to make good public policy and want to 9 comply with the Constitution could be a 10 beneficial way of resolving some of the tension 11 that seems to have developed over the last few 12 years between the court and the legislature.

13 Finally, I would also note that 14 frequently it's the majority of the legislature
15 who is most upset when the court strikes down 16 laws. I'm sure all of you are well aware that 17 very soon the majority could be the minority.
18 They might be very happy to have a court ready 19 there to strike down laws that the majority has 20 passed.

21 The courts inherently protect the 22 rights of the minorities. They are the ones 23 who make sure our process, which is not one 24 hundred percent democratic -- We have a limited 25 form of government. They want to make sure the 1 democratic process doesn't undo that limited

2 form of government, and we need to all remember 3 that the courts protect all of us even when the 4 majority is trying to impose its views on all 5 of us in a way that is contrary to the 6 Constitution.

7 Thank you, and if you have any 8 questions I'll be happy to answer. I will 9 provide staff with references, if not copies of 10 two law review articles which talk about the 11 informal or formal mechanisms that could be 12 developed for better dialogue between the state 13 court and state legislature.

14 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you, Mr.
15 Frankel. I have a question. In light of your 16 reference to Alexander Hamilton's Federalist
17 Papers, would you support a federal model
18 insofar as rule making is for the Pennsylvania 19 Supreme Court?

20 MR. FRANKEL: I and my organization
21 have not even begun to discuss that issue or 22 take a position. I'd certainly be willing to 23 take a look at it. I also think it would be 24 important to understand the impetus behind the 25 1968 Constitutional Convention.

1                   During the break I was chatting with 2                   Mr. Graci to see if he had more information
3                   since I believe he did present some good 4                   information about what happened, how the 5                   provision, that issue here today became part of 6                   the Constitution and statutory predecessors.
7                   He didn't really have that much information, 8                   but there is some good legislative history and 9                   maybe there is something that would be very 10                  enlightening from that constitutional 11                  convention; why they decided to vest this 12                  authority in the court in the Constitution 13                  rather than leave it as statutory.

14                  I'm going to defer a definitive 15                  answer until we can look at that legislative 16                  history or constitutional history, as well as 17                  consult our board of directors before I opine 18                  on that.

19                  CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very 20                  much. No questions, thank you for being here 21                  today and offering your testimony and 22                  information. We appreciate it.

23                  MR. FRANKEL: Thank you.

24                  CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Our final 25                  witness is Deb Spungin, President, and Julie

1 Good, Executive Director of Families of Murder
2 Victims. Along with them is Detective Patrick
3 Boyle and Nancy Boyle. I understand Deborah 4 Spungin is not here.

5 MS. GOOD: Good afternoon, members of 6 the Judiciary Committee and guests. Thank you 7 for the opportunity to testify concerning the 8 rule-making power of the Pennsylvania Supreme 9 Court relating to the death penalty appeal
10 process. I am here today particularly to speak 11 about the effects of delays in the death
12 penalty appeals on the victims of crime.

13 I am the Executive Director of the 14 Anti-Violence Partnership of Philadelphia, 15 which is a private nonprofit organization that 16 addresses the cycle of violence in Philadelphia
17 through victim services and violence prevention 18 programs. One of our two main programs is 19 Families of Murder Victims.

20 Families of Murder Victims was 21 started in 1980 as a support group for 22 relatives and close friends of homicide
23 victims, who we call co-victims. Over the past 24 17 years, Families of Murder Victims has grown 25 from the original support group to a

1 multidisciplinary victim service program, which 2 provides a variety of supportive services to 3 co-victims, including extensive assistance
4 throughout all stages of the criminal justice 5 system, case and system advocacy, and 6 individual and group therapeutic counseling for 7 adults and children. During this time we have 8 provided services to thousands of co-victims
9 both within and outside of Philadelphia.

10 At Families of Murder Victims we have 11 learned over the years that the criminal 12 justice system is one of the many factors that 13 can cause a secondary assault on homicide
14 survivors. A secondary victimization can 15 elicit a similar emotional reaction as that 16 which occurs following the original criminal 17 act. In some cases a co-victim can be even 18 more traumatized by this second injury. The 19 co-victim is in a state of emotional
20 dependency, trusting that help will be provided
21 by systems for which he or she has formed 22 lifelong and trusting expectations. Because of 23 this, co-victims are often further shocked and 24 frustrated by lack of the criminal justice
25 system's response to their needs.

1                   This is especially true regarding the 2                   long delays that are caused by appeals in 3                   criminal litigations for the death penalty. In 4                   Pennsylvania, it often takes 15 years or longer 5                   for all appeals to be heard while not denying 6                   the defendant any of his legal constitutional 7                   rights. During this period, co-victims
8                   repeatedly experience an acute grief reaction 9                   on every occasion the case is brought before 10                  the court. They are unable to work on their 11                  grief or to work through a resolution until the 12                  court has made a final ruling on this case.
13                  There are severe emotional reactions as the 14                  co-victim rehears and relives the circumstances 15                  of the murder in the courtroom. So, in effect, 16                  homicide co-victims live in a clouded world of 17                  grief for years after the murder occurs.

18                  Co-victims report that they must put 19                  their grief on hold during this long period 20                  because the emotional energy is not available 21                  to deal with both court proceedings and the 22                  emotional rigors of working through their 23                  grief.

24                  Despite common perceptions, it is not 25                  true that all co-victims actively seek the 1 death penalty for the murderers of their loved

2 ones, especially in states such as Pennsylvania
3 in which the criminal code includes a sentence 4 of true life without parole. However, once an 5 arrest has been made and a conviction secured, 6 all co-victims need a final and unalterable 7 conclusion to the criminal justice process in 8 order for them to redirect their energy and 9 attention to focusing on a new direction in 10 life. Those of us who work closely with 11 co-victims understand that life will never be 12 the same as it was before their tragic loss.
13 The best situation they can hope to achieve is 14 a new normal that will allow them to find peace
15 and comfort in future relationships.

16           However, as long as the appeals
17 process extends through decades of time, this 18 sense of closure and completeness is denied to 19 co-victims. I heartily support all measures 20 that will result in a reduction of the time 21 needed to exhaust the proper constitutional 22 appeals of defendants who are sentenced to the 23 death penalty. Until that time, the criminal 24 justice system will continue to inflict a 25 second victimization on co-victims of homicide.

1 It is unfortunately all too true that in these 2 cases for the surviving loved ones of homicide 3 victims, justice delayed is truly justice
4 denied.

5 Thank you for the opportunity to 6 speak on this important issue.

7 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very
8 much for your testimony. Detective Boyle.

9 DETECTIVE BOYLE: Good afternoon. I
10 wish to take this opportunity to thank you all 11 for affording me this opportunity to speak to 12 you today about this issue.

13 As stated, my name is Patrick Boyle.
14 I'm a detective with the Philadelphia Police 15 Department. I have served the City of 16 Philadelphia for 32 years. I want to give you 17 a little brief history of my family. Two of my 18 brothers followed my footsteps into the police 19 department, as did a brother-in-law who was 20 shot in 1972. Fortunately he survived. He 21 attempted to stop two men that was robbing a 22 bar and its patrons. He's on disability now.

23 To the point, my son, Officer Daniel
24 Boyle, followed our footsteps into the police 25 department and graduated from the police

1 academy in June of 1990. He is assigned to the 2 26th District of Philadelphia, East Girard and 3 Montgomery. If you know the area, and I think 4 some of you do, it's a very high crime area.

5 On February 4, 1991, approximately 6 2:40 in the morning, Danny stopped what he 7 suspected to be and turned out to be a stolen
8 automobile. The operator of this automobile
9 jumped from the car and proceeded to fire a 10 9-millimeter semiautomatic handgun at Danny.
11 One of the 13 shots fired struck Danny in the 12 right temple. Danny died of his wounds two 13 days later at Temple University Hospital.
14 Danny was 21 years old and he served for one 15 year and one day. I guess we are the 16 co-victims that the previous witness spoke 17 about.

18 The perpetrator of this crime was 19 arrested, tried and convicted of first-degree 20 murder. He was tried and convicted by a jury 21 of his peers and sentenced to death. Now after 22 almost six years of appeals, legal maneuvering,
23 we as a family are now facing yet another 24 hearing on December the 15th at City Hall. The 25 defense team is using that catch-all phrase

1           ineffective counsel. All other appeals were 2           denied. The defense is also alleging that the 3           defendant suffers from some sort of mental 4           disorder. After six years it's discovered.

5                       We, as a family, have suffered the 6           worst kind of loss possible for anyone, the 7           loss of a child, the loss of a child to 8           violence. The only person seems to be 9           important today is the one left alive--the 10          convicted killer sentenced to death.

11                      Many people seem to forget about the 12          victim. They forget about the families left 13          behind. We don't seem to count anymore. We 14          often wonder if any of these legal do-gooders 15          ever sit back and reflect and think about the 16          victim. Do they think about my Danny? Do they 17          think about the families left behind? Do they 18          think about the devastating effects that we 19          have to face on a daily basis? Do they 20          understand or does anybody ever care? Do they 21          understand that through each nonsensical appeal
22          we must relive Danny's injuries, the shooting, 23          the hospital vigil and his funeral.

24                      As the days and the weeks and the 25          months and the years go by, we have done our

1 best to get our lives into some sort of order.
2 But, every time we start to feel on a certain 3 level, a certain plane this comes up in arrears 4 once more. We start back again on that 5 emotional roller coaster up and down. When is 6 it going to end?

7 Victims' families, we need and we 8 deserve to know that there is a legal end to 9 this nightmare. Being a member of the law 10 enforcement I do agree wholeheartedly with the 11 appeal process. I understand that we -- I 12 would be the last one to deny a defendant his 13 right to an appeal. But, there has to be an 14 end. There has to be a time limit. There has 15 to be a light at the end of this tunnel for the 16 families of these people. I'm not talking just 17 about me. I'm talking about every family of a 18 murder victim throughout this state and 19 throughout this country for that matter.

20 We all need and we all must have some 21 sort of closure so that our loved ones may 22 finally rest in peace. Thank you.

23 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: Thank you very
24 much, Detective Boyle.

25 DETECTIVE BOYLE: I'd be happy to 1 answer any questions you might have. Excuse me 2 for my --

3 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: That's quite all
4 right. Representative Caltagirone.

5 REPRESENTATIVE CALTAGIRONE: No
6 questions.

7 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: I have no
8 questions, but a comment that your testimony is 9 compelling that what happens here in the 10 Capitol does not happen in the vacuum; that 11 people's lives are affected and changed by what 12 we do, whether it's here in the General
13 Assembly or in the court, in the Supreme Court.
14 Certainly, and I'll finish with this, as one 15 United States Supreme Court justice once said, 16 justice delayed is justice denied. It's very 17 evident in your case that justice has been 18 denied.

19 DETECTIVE BOYLE: Thank you, sir.

20 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: We would hope
21 that the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania would 22 reexamine it's prerogative under its rule-23 making authority and pay more attention to the 24 will of the people as expressed through the 25 General Assembly where it's appropriate. I

1 thank you for being here today and we share 2 with you the sorrow that you have.

3 DETECTIVE BOYLE: Thanks very much.

4 CHAIRPERSON GANNON: This meeting of 5 the House Judiciary Committee is adjourned.

6 (At or about 1:50 p.m. the hearing
7 concluded)
