1 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Good morning,
2 ladies and gentlemen. We will call the meeting of 3 the Judiciary Task Force Committee to order.

4 My name is Steve Maitland. I'm the 5 Chairman of the Task Force. I'm the State 6 Representative of the 91st District in Adams and 7 Franklin Counties.

8 I'm joined here today by 9 Representative Tom Stevenson of nearby Green Tree.
10 And to my right is Michael Schwoyer. He's chief 11 counsel to the House Judiciary Committee. And down
12 at the end there is Jane Mendlow. She is the staff 13 person for the Democratic Chairman, Kevin Blaum.

14 The purpose of the Task Force today is 15 to examine and take testimony on House Bill 2374, 16 which is an amendment to the Mental Health and 17 Procedures Act on involuntary commitment standards.

18 I introduced this in response to a 19 constituent who is going to testify later here today 20 about the problems that she encountered with the 21 inability to get someone who desperately needed 22 treatment into treatment. The person doesn't 23 voluntarily want to go.

24 This is the second of two hearings.
25 We had a hearing last Wednesday in Bridgeport in

1 suburban Philadelphia. We had a lot of good
2 testimony, a lot of arguments pro and con about this 3 legislation, and a lot of suggestions on ways to 4 improve the bill.

5 The purpose of the Task Force is take 6 a rough piece of legislation and try and get it into 7 a better form for consideration for the full 8 Judiciary Committee. Therefore, it's the goal of 9 this Task Force to end up with after the amendment 10 process a more complete and more final version of 11 the bill that the full House Judiciary Committee can 12 consider.

13 With that, I will ask our first 14 testifier to come forward. Barry Fisher, Dr. Barry 15 Fisher from the Pennsylvania Psychiatric Society.

16 MR. FISHER: Good morning.

17 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Good morning.

18 MR. FISHER: Thank you for inviting 19 me here to represent the views of the Pennsylvania 20 Psychiatric Society. I should add that I'm also an 21 employee of the Veterans Administration Hospital
22 here in Pittsburgh.

23 You might be puzzled that a 24 psychiatrist and a psychiatric society would oppose 25 a bill that is a bill that makes it easier for us to

1 get patients necessary care before dangerous
2 behavior occurs. We, like the families and other 3 members of society who support this bill, would like 4 to prevent dangerous events from occurring that are 5 secondary to mental illness.

6 Why would we oppose it? Well, as you
7 know, commitment laws are by their very nature 8 coercive so that when we are looking at forcing 9 somebody against their will into a treatment, we do 10 have to balance the desire to get them necessary 11 treatment with supporting their right to 12 self-determination and individual decision-making.

13 We believe that the proposed changes
14 in this bill sway too far away from an individual's 15 ability to make personal decisions and it undermines
16 self-determination.

17 As a clinician, I know that the most 18 powerful tool that I have in getting patients to 19 participate in their care and to agree to my 20 treatment recommendations is the sense of trust that 21 they have in me and the therapeutic relationship 22 that we have together.

23 Again, by its very nature, a 24 commitment is a coercive interaction and tends to 25 place the patient in a position where they are not

1 feeling empowered, they are not an equal player in 2 the relationship. And while they may be prevented 3 from harm in the short run, the harm to the 4 therapeutic relationship can be so severe that what 5 we see rather than an improvement and understanding 6 of their mental illness, we would see a revolving 7 door in the hospital, out of the hospital, in the 8 hospital, out of the hospital and so on.

9 One of the biggest concerns that the 10 society has, and myself in particular is the 11 vagueness of the predictive factors that can lead to 12 an involuntary hospitalization. Dangerousness, of 13 course, is quite clear. But as you will hear from 14 other people testifying today, that may seem to be 15 so restrictive that people don't get care. And I 16 can appreciate the concerns involved in supporting a 17 desire to get people to care before a bad event has 18 occurred.

19 On the other hand, what sort of 20 behaviors are predictive of decompensation? What if 21 the patient with religious delusions who has a 22 history of vandalizing churches and other buildings 23 when he is psychotic and you learn that he is 24 starting to attend his own church again more 25 regularly? The family knows that this has often

1 been one of the behaviors that leads to 2 deterioration and potential acting-out behavior that 3 is secondary to the mental illness.

4 Do we at that juncture when the person
5 is attending church bring them into the hospital 6 because we know that that is a sign that they are 7 getting worse? I believe that if we do that, we are 8 leaning too far away from the person's rights to 9 self-determination.

10 Another example might be a patient
11 with a history of bipolar disorder who has had a 12 history of spending money when manic and exhausting 13 the family's funds. He chooses at one time to 14 purchase a vehicle that his spouse doesn't agree 15 that they should have. Is that a sign of 16 deterioration or a difference in opinion between his 17 spouse and himself on how to spend their money?
18 The vagueness is, I think, what we have trouble with 19 in this legislation.

20 Another thing mentioned is cruelty to 21 animals. And while I'm a dog lover, I have two dogs 22 myself and I abhor the idea of people being cruel to 23 animals and certainly would want to prevent it if 24 it's secondary to a mental illness; in point of 25 fact, cruelty to animals is a rather rare event in

1 the chronically mentally ill and is more typical of 2 anti-social tendencies and criminal tendencies.

3 And I think inclusion of that 4 criterion in this bill has the potential to fill our 5 hospitals with people who might otherwise be more 6 appropriate for the legal system.

7 One of the other concerns that I have 8 is something that is applied by this bill, and 9 certainly I would agree with it, is that stopping 10 medications is one of the great predictors of 11 deterioration, particularly with psychotic
12 disorders, manic depressive disorders.

13 On the other hand, patients truly have 14 unpleasant side effects from some of the 15 medications. To coerce a patient into a situation 16 where they are not able to express their desire for 17 something different by refusing treatment, in other 18 words, by having the threat of hospitalization and 19 coercion as the primary means of getting them to 20 comply with treatment, we really undermine the 21 therapeutic alliance and we also prevent a necessary 22 dialogue between the patient and the physician about 23 issues like side effects and compliance. I see that 24 as a concern.

25 And while I would certainly like to be

1 able to get my patients to take their medications
2 when I know that they are helpful, I also know that 3 there are times that they refuse the medications and 4 it's probably been the right thing and a wake-up 5 call for me to make appropriate changes in the 6 treatment.

7 If we at the Pennsylvania Psychiatric 8 Society agree in principle with the goals of this 9 bill, but disagree with the actual bill itself, what 10 can we recommend that we think would help support 11 our desire to get greater access to care for 12 patients who may be decompensating? There are 13 several impediments to care that we would like to 14 see legislation change.

15 One are restricted formularies.
16 Again, a reason that patients are often noncompliant 17 with treatment is side effects. Unfortunately, the 18 medications with less side effects that are not so 19 onerous for patients to receive are expensive and 20 often restricted in certain managed care 21 pharmaceutical formularies.

22 We believe that a lifting of these 23 restrictions would enhance the doctor/patient 24 relationship and enhance compliance and avoid 25 situations where coercive treatment is necessary.

1 We believe that mental health parity will improve 2 access to care and, again, improve the ability of 3 patients to receive care prior to severe 4 decompensation.

5 In point of fact, managed care
6 criterion for admission often require the kind of 7 dangerousness criterion that you see in the current 8 Mental Health Procedures Act. What if we were to 9 liberalize the ability of patients to receive care
10 without changing the Mental Health Procedures Act?
11 In other words, what if we were able to get people 12 to hospitalization who want the hospitalization 13 prior to their behaving in a dangerous way that the 14 managed care company can agree is a reasonable 15 reason for them to have admission?

16 This is something I don't have to deal 17 with in the VA system. We do not have as 18 restrictive kind of management of care. I can 19 hospitalize patients more freely than I was able to 20 when I worked in the private sector. So these are 21 some of the ways.

22 Another thing, in my work at the VA
23 Hospital I work in a clinic that is called the 24 Intensive Case Management Clinic. We take our very 25 sickest schizophrenic and bipolar and other

1 chronically mentally ill patients and we assign them
2 to a case worker that meets with them at least once 3 a week, helps them manage their medications, their 4 pill boxes and so on, checks on them. I found that 5 we have been able to both prevent hospitalization 6 when deterioration was occurring or promote 7 hospitalization without commitment when a person was 8 deteriorating.

9 This has been a very cost effective
10 clinic for the VA to run. I don't have the numbers 11 in front of me, but I know that there has been 12 tremendous cost avoidance for the VA by instituting 13 a program that is a little more expensive on the 14 outpatient end, but has reduced hospital days and 15 has reduced the need for commitment hearings and so 16 on which are also costly and time consuming for both 17 physicians and people in the legal system.

18 So with these recommendations and 19 opinions, I now want to answer any questions that 20 you might have regarding the Pennsylvania
21 Psychiatric Society's stance toward this bill.

22 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very 23 much, Dr. Fisher.

24 Any questions?

25 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Not yet.

1 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I have a few for 2 you.

3 MR. FISHER: Okay.

4 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: This act has been 5 in a large way a change since it was put in place in 6 1976. There has been, of course, an enormous change
7 in the understanding of treatment of mental illness
8 and the number of medicines available to treat it 9 and other kinds of therapy.

10 You say this bill goes too far. Do
11 you see any change to the act to take into account 12 the changes that we have seen over the last 25, 26 13 years?

14 MR. FISHER: I think what you are 15 saying is how can we get people medications and 16 treatments that they're currently unwilling to take.
17 And part of why they are unwilling to take it is 18 that they are mentally ill. And the assumption, I 19 believe, that you have and the proponents of this 20 bill have is that if you can treat the mental 21 illness the insight will follow.

22 There is some truth to that. But I
23 think that what I see as problematic about that 24 assumption is that a desire for self-determination 25 is something that the mentally ill and the

1 nonmentally ill wish for. And I don't believe the 2 assumption that a refusal of treatment is 3 necessarily an indication of mental illness. I can 4 more powerfully get a person to treatment by working 5 with them as opposed to coercing them.

6 I have seen it all too often that I 7 have had to commit a person -- and, granted, they 8 were committable under the current Mental Health 9 Procedures Act. I would get them better, they would 10 agree that they are thinking better; but they would 11 leave and stop their medications because they were 12 angry at the process. They felt coerced.

13 It wasn't clear to me that that was,
14 that anger over the coercion was, secondary to 15 mental illness. They may have not had the insight 16 that they needed at the time. They also may have 17 suffered tremendous side effects.

18 I have been in practice for over ten
19 years, and there has been huge changes. When I 20 first started in training which was in the mid '80s, 21 these anti-psychotic medications were quite onerous 22 to take, filled with side effects. And it's not 23 clear to me that it was necessarily an indication of 24 mental illness when a patient refused to take a 25 medication that caused tremors, twitches of their

1 mouth, stiffness, drooling.

2 I guess I am in favor of anything that 3 promotes the doctor/patient relationship. And I'm 4 leery of anything that can undermine that.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Having had the 6 benefit of sitting through a previous hearing and 7 getting a lot of testimony, it seems to me that 8 generally speaking we are talking about two 9 different classes of patients.

10 We are talking about, on one hand, the 11 class of mentally ill patients who understands or at 12 least has the capacity to come to the understanding 13 of their illness and the need for treatment. And 14 then is the classifications that we are really 15 trying to address with this legislation, the ones 16 that are so sick and don't know it, or they get 17 medicated and start to feel good and think they 18 don't need their medicine. And this becomes a 19 predictable pattern of deterioration.

20 The literature all says that if you 21 let them go without being treated, you lengthen the 22 amount of treatment they need, you probably lessen 23 the amount of functioning that they can recover.
24 And it seems to me that if we don't make a change 25 like what's being proposed here, that we are failing

1 really the families and the patients.

2 MR. FISHER: You know, I would have to 3 agree with you from a scientific standpoint that the 4 data is very clear when a bipolar patient is allowed 5 to relapse in mania, the ability to treat that next 6 manic episode is compromised and can often require 7 greater medications. There is no question that 8 science is in favor of getting people to treatment 9 who need it, the very severely ill.

10 Again, my concern is the vagueness and 11 the potential threat to patient autonomy. One other 12 concern that I didn't mention in my testimony but 13 had occurred to me as I read the legislation was 14 that a person who is mentally ill, who knows it, 15 might nevertheless avoid getting treatment because 16 they would think that a future behavior that they 17 may have might be interpreted as a prediction that 18 they are going to get sick and that they might lose 19 rights and freedoms. They might be manipulated by 20 not so well intended people. So they might never 21 ever seek care.

22 This is a tremendous fear that people
23 have currently that are mentally ill. There is a 24 belief that once defined as such you will lose all 25 rights and privileges in any event. So that's

1 another concern I have, by legislation that's vague 2 and open to interpretation, how many people will 3 suffer in silence as oppose to seek care.

4 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: The act says that 5 treatment on a voluntary basis shall be referred to 6 involuntary treatment, and in every case the least 7 restrictions consistent with that of treatment shall 8 be employed. And we are not going to change that.

9 And then it says that treatment may 10 include inpatient treatment, partial 11 hospitalization, or outpatient treatment. But 12 outpatient treatment really isn't an option to 13 people under the current law, because if they are to 14 the point where they are an immediate threat to 15 themselves or others, they are not candidates for 16 outpatient treatment.

17 So under this proposal, you can more 18 easily get people into outpatient treatment where 19 they would perhaps have more of a sense of 20 self-determination than they do with the current 21 statute.

22 MR. FISHER: Let me say that I am now
23 taking off my hat representing the state and tell 24 you my own personal views about outpatient 25 commitments. And, again, I want to say that this is 1 my own personal view.

2 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Okay.

3 MR. FISHER: I think outpatient
4 commitment has the potential to be a very powerful 5 tool in keeping people from requiring 6 hospitalization and from getting to the point where 7 they can be 302'd for dangerous behavior.

8 The problem I experience is that 9 current outpatient commitment laws are basically a 10 paper tiger. They are only as effective as the 11 patient's belief that they are effective. In point 12 of fact, if the person refuses to show up or take 13 their medications and they are on an involuntary 14 commitment on an outpatient basis, there is very 15 little that I can actually do to enforce it.

16 It may be that rather than changing 17 the whole Mental Health Procedures Act, attention to 18 the outpatient commitment statutes and provisions 19 might be a way to go and could that be an area where 20 a more liberal interpretation of deterioration could 21 occur. Now, even having said that, I'm not sure 22 that this bill -- let's say this bill was limited to 23 outpatient commitment, these amendments. It's my 24 view that they may still be too liberal in 25 interpretation or lean too heavily against patient

1 self-determination.

2 But I do agree with you that I would 3 like to see outpatient commitments have some teeth 4 because they currently don't.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I've seen in New 6 York they enacted a law called Kendra's Law. And 7 some of the statistics on the improvement in the 8 number of patients that are medicated, they are not 9 homeless anymore, suicides are down, criminal 10 convictions are down.

11 MR. FISHER: That's right.

12 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: That's where we 13 are trying to go with this.

14 MR. FISHER: Right.

15 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: You talked about 16 your intensive case management that you do.

17 MR. FISHER: Yes.

18 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Is any of that 19 court ordered?

20 MR. FISHER: Yes. In many cases we're 21 talking about outpatient commitments, so they are 22 committed to the outpatient treatment.

23 Now, the reason they work quite 24 honestly is that the patients don't understand how 25 little power the commitment really has. They

1 believe that if they don't comply with the 2 outpatient treatment that that necessarily means 3 hospitalization. In point of fact, that isn't how 4 these laws actually play out.

5 They can get people to their 6 appointments if they don't show up. But, again, 7 that's contingent on being able to finance the case 8 managers and go out and look for them and so on.

9 Again, where I see the problem isn't 10 so much in changing the law in terms of access, but 11 changing the financial status of the mental 12 healthcare centers that have intensive case
13 managers, lessening the case managers' caseloads 14 because they have huge, overwhelming caseloads. The 15 caseloads that we have at the VA are very reasonable 16 for our case managers to manage.

17 That isn't the case -- I know how we 18 differ from the county mental health centers. And 19 it's possible for the case managers I work with to 20 actually be Johnny-on-the-spot on top of things with 21 the patients. I don't think it's true as much in 22 the mental health centers.

23 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I agree with your 24 suggestions about the drug formularies and the 25 mental health parity and things like that. I'm not

1 so sure about the advanced directives. But they are 2 not in the purview of this committee.

3 MR. FISHER: Actually, the advanced
4 directives, I believe, was from someone else's 5 testimony.

6 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Right. Another
7 hat I wear is I chair the Crime and Corrections 8 Subcommittee of the Judiciary Committee. And some 9 of the statistics I've been reading suggest that 16
10 to 20 percent of the inmates that are in state 11 prisons are mentally ill. And, again, if we can get 12 them to treatment.

13 MR. FISHER: I recently a few months
14 back testified on the issue of mental health courts, 15 the idea of it being a diversion of the mentally ill 16 who are incarcerated to appropriate care as opposed 17 to incarceration. And the State Psychiatric Society
18 very much supports that legislation. At the point 19 of incarceration, we would certainly like to see a 20 very quick movement of the mentally ill from the 21 prisons where they are not going to get appropriate 22 care to mental health facilities. We support that 23 wholeheartedly.

24 I think where we differ is this idea 25 of preventing the event from occurring, not because

1 we don't want to prevent it from occurring because 2 we do, but we see a leaning away from 3 self-determination for the patients, and a 4 discrimination, in a sense, against the mentally 5 ill's rights.

6 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I just have a
7 couple other comments.

8 MR. FISHER: Sure.

9 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: You mentioned that 10 perhaps the terms are not defined in the act.
11 Actually, they are legal terms of art, like cruelty
12 to animals is in the Crimes Code, Title 18. So a 13 judge would have access to the definitions and the 14 legal terms such as predictable deterioration, 15 totality of circumstances. But like you, I'm not a 16 lawyer, one of the few on the Judiciary Committee
17 that's not a lawyer. I am aware that those terms 18 are defined elsewhere in law.

19 You had mentioned that there are 20 circumstances where it would seem reasonable for a 21 patient to stop taking their medication. As a 22 physician, do you want patients making that 23 decision? I mean, wouldn't it be ideal for them to 24 come to you and say they are having problems with 25 their medication and you would adjust it?

1 MR. FISHER: Absolutely. That's the 2 ideal. My concern is that that dialogue could be 3 hampered by their sense of being coerced into the 4 treatment. I also have concerns, you know, 5 physicians while very well intended can make 6 mistakes, can be overwhelmed with a high volume of 7 patients and not necessarily pay attention to side 8 effect concerns.

9 It's not my intent to malign my 10 colleagues or suggest that in any way I or other 11 psychiatrists are incompetent, but mistakes can 12 happen. And often it's the patient's refusal to 13 treatment that can be the wake-up call, hey, maybe 14 we did make a mistake. I guess that's my concern.

15 In a busy practice where a physician 16 might be able to not listen as carefully to the 17 patient's concerns or to be able to say, you know, 18 I've heard this all before. This patient has 19 refused medications because of their illness and go 20 ahead and treat it in a more coercive manner, might 21 they miss an actual legitimate concern of that 22 patient.

23 These are my concerns.

24 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I guess my last 25 question -- maybe you're not the right one to ask --

1 is you mentioned that we can't force treatment on 2 other people unless they have been judged
3 incompetent. What does it take in the case of the 4 mentally ill person to get them legally determined 5 to be incompetent?

6 MR. FISHER: That's a very good
7 question. The assumption of this bill is that 8 refusal of treatment or certain behaviors that have 9 been predictive of deterioration might be evidence 10 of incompetence. I'm not sure if that's true. My 11 sense is that that's a sweeping assumption.

12 And, again, that's where our 13 oppositions of this bill lie.

14 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: It might be and it
15 might not be. The bill gives the authority to the 16 judge to look at the totality of the circumstances 17 and past behavior to make that decision.

18 MR. FISHER: That's right.

19 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you, Doctor.

20 MR. FISHER: Sure.

21 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Representative
22 Stevenson.

23 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Thank you,
24 Mr. Chairman.

25 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: You're welcome.

1 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Thank you
2 for your testimony. It was very informative for 3 myself. I want to go back to something you said
4 initially. Really what it comes down to is a 5 balancing act of, I guess, society's need to get 6 these people treatment versus the right of that 7 patient's self-determination.

8 In the end, which should be given more 9 weight?

10 MR. FISHER: Psychiatrists are 11 excellent at side stepping questions. This is one 12 of our skills. It's required in numerous clinical 13 interactions, so this may seem like that.

14 The most powerful tool I go back to 15 that, in helping to protect society from dangerous 16 behavior of the mentally ill is not a coercive 17 stance which is in a sense a kind of incarceration 18 although it's a kinder incarceration. It's an 19 incarceration in a mental health facility with the 20 idea that in a paternalistic way we will help this 21 person get better and help them.

22 That paternalism and that coercion can 23 undermine the therapeutic relationship, which is 24 truly the most powerful tool to keep the revolving 25 door from occurring and to promote treatment.

1 In that sense, I guess I will answer
2 your question and, that is, that probably the 3 self-determination is more important. Why is that?
4 Because, ultimately, that's what's going to get the 5 person the necessary treatment.

6 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Isn't it
7 true that if society's need to get that person
8 treatment really shouldn't be given more weight you 9 wouldn't have a job, in a sense? I'm trying to get 10 you turned back around. I disagree with you, 11 obviously.

12 MR. FISHER: Right. But there are 13 criterion. I mean, they're very clear criterion, 14 evidence of dangerousness. And that can be 15 interpreted in a somewhat liberal way as well. I 16 mean, I have involuntarily hospitalized people who 17 have touched me or have touched another person.
18 That was a kind of battery. And it was movement 19 toward a more aggressive stance.

20 Threats, verbal threats, verbal
21 threats to harm oneself or others. I mean, there 22 are very clear and somewhat liberal criterion to get 23 a person into involuntary treatment.

24 All too often what has prevented a 25 patient from staying in a hospital after they have

1 been 302'd has been the refusal of the person who 2 committed them to begin with to show up at the 3 hearing.

4 I've also been witness to, even under 5 the current Mental Health Procedures Act, abuses of 6 this act where angry and disgruntled family members 7 have coerced a person into the hospital because they 8 wanted to get a hold of their money, because they 9 wanted to manipulate them in some way. I have seen 10 that numerous times.

11 While the legal system in place is 12 there to protect the patient from those abuses, and 13 it does, on a 302, that's five days. That 14 manipulative family member could deplete that 15 person's bank account if they have a joint account
16 during those five days. There is potential harm
17 done to the person who isn't suffering from a 18 deterioration that could lead to aggression, but who 19 has been manipulated by a person who has 302'd them.

20 And it's a judgment call of the person 21 who is manning the telephone for the County Mental 22 Health Department to determine if that person should 23 be committed or not. And it's been my experience 24 that the fear and concern about allowing a 25 potentially dangerous person to go free far

1 outweighs the decision to let them leave at that 2 point, as it should.

3 I think a judgment call that is made 4 at that step tends more often to lean in favor of 5 302 commitment. I think that's okay. I guess what 6 I'm saying is that I think, given the balancing act
7 that's needed in this, that we have a pretty good 8 Mental Health Procedures Act and that beefing up 9 other aspects of mental health treatment is what 10 will accomplish the same goals that the people that 11 have proposed this bill or suggested it want to 12 achieve.

13 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Thank you.

14 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I have one more
15 question that occurred to me.

16 MR. FISHER: Sure.

17 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: The 30-day medical 18 history, is that long enough for the court to 19 consider in these proceedings?

20 MR. FISHER: That's an interesting
21 question. I think that's a huge, huge judgment
22 call. You know, in terms of response to treatment, 23 it can take one to three months to see an actual 24 response in medication or nonmedication treatment
25 for a person. So the 30 days, is that clinically

1 relevant or not, that I don't know.

2 I guess your question is if a person
3 has threatened somebody 60 or 90 days prior, could 4 that be useful. The problem I see in that is if 5 they were mentally ill 60 days ago and not mentally 6 ill 30 days ago, but they are in a conflict with 7 somebody who wants to commit them, could that 60
8 days be used against them. The same with 30 days.
9 There is a certain arbitrariness to that decision.

10 I really have a hard time saying what 11 the right thing to do in this case would be.

12 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you.

13 Mr. Schwoyer.

14 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you, Mr.
15 Chairman. Thank you, Doctor.

16 First, you talked about the mental 17 health courts and you testified previously in that 18 area and you said society produced legislation, and 19 you refer to authorize use of mental health courts 20 to divert people from the criminal justice system to 21 mental health treatment arena.

22 MR. FISHER: Right.

23 MR. SCHWOYER: The problem that I have 24 with that is -- a little bit of background on me. I 25 was a prosecutor for ten years before I came to work

1 at the General Assembly. My problem with that is 2 that the crime has already allegedly been committed, 3 somebody has been hurt, damaged or injured at that 4 point in time. And to excuse conduct because of a
5 mental illness at that point in time, I'm not sure 6 that I understand that.

7 This bill is an attempt to, as you 8 said, prevent the conduct from occurring in the 9 first place. Likewise, with the use of the mental 10 health courts and from what I know of the courts, 11 they seem to be a wonderful and available tool and 12 it's something that the committee has had me looking 13 at to get more information for them. But there's 14 also the district attorney and the police involved 15 at that point and a victim who has been harmed. My 16 guess is it makes no difference to the person whose 17 property has been damaged or who has been assaulted, 18 punched in the face, feels the same whether a person 19 has a mental illness or not.

20 So to say that we don't need this 21 because mental health works in a better way, I'm not 22 sure they address the same sort of conduct. That 23 was the problem I had with some of your suggestions, 24 the five suggestions, in your testimony. I don't 25 know that any of them address the concern that this

1 bill addresses.

2 MR. FISHER: The bill clearly intends 3 to address prevention of dangerous behavior that 4 might occur secondary to mental illness. I think 5 the goal is admirable. The concern that our society 6 has is that how many people will wind up with the 7 burden of involuntary hospitalization or commitment 8 who ought not to be.

9 MR. SCHWOYER: But we can't forget
10 that the law currently contemplates involuntary
11 outpatient treatment or partial hospitalization. I
12 find that the onus of this legislation always talks 13 in terms of the most extreme, severe, forced 14 compliance authorized which is -- that's scary is 15 involuntary hospitalization. But there's also a 16 provision for an involuntary outpatient.

17 MR. FISHER: Well, there are serious 18 consequences, unfortunately, and, again, this is 19 something that I would like to see changed. There 20 are very serious consequences to a diagnosis or, 21 quote, label of a mental illness. A person who has 22 been diagnosed with depression may not be able to 23 obtain life insurance or may have very expensive 24 life insurance.

25 An involuntary commitment, whether

1 justified or not, may prevent that person from being 2 able to purchase firearms. What if they live in a
3 rural area where that is something that gives them a 4 sense of safety. They can't do that legally.
5 There is a duty or a desire that we all have to 6 protect society. But we also protect society when 7 we do not force people and coerce people into 8 certain things inappropriately, we protect our 9 individual freedoms.

10 MR. SCHWOYER: Those concerns, though, 11 I guess are concerns with the existing law because 12 the medication compliance presupposedly diagnose and 13 prescribe medication, so the label's already been 14 applied, those consequences have already been felt.

15 MR. FISHER: But that may have been a 16 person who voluntarily sought treatment at one point 17 in their life. And now because they have been 18 diagnosed with a mental illness, somebody is saying, 19 oh, you're just crazy, when in point of fact what 20 they want to do is manipulate the mental health
21 system to harm that person. That can occur. It 22 occurs under the current mental health procedure 23 law. I see it all the time. This would only make 24 that more common.

25 I understand the balancing act. We

1 need to -- when a murder occurs because somebody has 2 been mentally ill, it's a horrible thing. I think 3 we all tend to say, let's liberalize the capacity to 4 commit people because protecting society is the more 5 important issue. We see that right now in terms of 6 what we're doing with immigration laws and so forth.
7 We have flipped the other coin.

8 It's always a balancing act. But if 9 we lean too far, I believe that the mental health 10 courts will be inundated, the hospitals will be 11 inundated. There won't be meaningful changes in 12 terms of managed care, so that you're hospitalizing 13 all these people who insurance companies aren't 14 willing to pay for. You're creating circumstances 15 where patients feel that their relationships with 16 their physicians and their relatives are 17 adversarial.

18 MR. SCHWOYER: You made that statement
19 before. I was trying to figure out in my mind how 20 you can make that statement regarding relationships, 21 yet you said that the court-ordered involuntary 22 treatment works because the patient thinks if they 23 don't abide by the court ordered treatment, then 24 there is going to be more severe penalties.

25 MR. FISHER: It only works with those

1 folks.

2 MR. SCHWOYER: Looking through your 3 things, No. 5 is for drug formularies, expand them.
4 I'm not sure how that would help.

5 MR. FISHER: Well, a person may be 6 noncompliant because they have severe side effects 7 of the older anti-psychotic medications, so at some 8 point they are involuntarily committed. Then maybe 9 they are actually committed on an outpatient basis
10 and they are receiving these medications by monthly 11 injections. They are never afforded the opportunity 12 to refuse that and never afforded the opportunity to 13 get on a newer, more expensive anti-psychotic 14 medication. So now this person is forced into 15 treatment that is going to give them a long-term 16 motor disorder that can be quite disabling.

17 The other issue about the restricted
18 formularies is that what happens when you have a 19 formulary that makes a physician leap through so 20 many hurdles and even after that refuses to allow 21 them to prescribe a medication that doesn't result 22 in these side effects.

23 I mean, the issue of access to care
24 is, from my vantage point, less about the patient 25 refusing the treatment than it is about the same

1 society that would like to get them away and protect 2 themselves from safety, is also the same society
3 that is not willing to pay for the expensive 4 treatments that help keep them out of the hospital.

5 MR. SCHWOYER: I understand that. We 6 heard lots of people talk about the need for more 7 funding, which is very much related to the issues in 8 House Bill 2374, yet probably more appropriate for 9 Appropriations or Finance or Health and Human 10 Services.

11 MR. FISHER: But without it, this is 12 incarceration.

13 MR. SCHWOYER: I understand that. But 14 who is to say that that isn't something that another 15 committee is dealing with if the funds were there.
16 If the formulary -- if mental health parity was the 17 law in Pennsylvania, the managed care issue is 18 reformed --

19 MR. FISHER: This is a philosophical 20 debate on society's capacity and right to coerce and 21 remove individual rights. It becomes more of, I 22 think, a legal governmental philosophical debate 23 than it does a mental health debate. I agree with 24 you, it is desirable to prevent dangerous behavior 25 before it occurs. I also think it's desirable that

1 people have as much freedom and self-determination 2 as they can possible have.

3 What's the best balance? We think 4 that the Mental Health Procedures Act of 1976 took 5 those considerations into account and did well with 6 balancing that, and that we can improve that balance 7 not by changing legislation but by improving access 8 to care. Will there be cases, though, where a 9 dangerous event will occur that we wish we could 10 have prevented? Absolutely. It will happen.

11 It's always a balancing act. That's 12 the debate going on regarding immigration laws right 13 now and preventing terrorism.

14 MR. SCHWOYER: Do you ever get phone 15 calls from family members or friends or 16 acquaintances from persons suffering from serious
17 mental illness who say, Mike is -- I don't believe 18 he is taking his medicine. I found three months 19 worth of prescriptions on the floor of his car.
20 Mike is again talking about how he's going to make 21 lots of money at the racetrack. I don't think he's 22 been into work. What can I do to help?

23 What do you tell that person? As soon
24 as he started to hurt you or someone else, let me 25 know.

1 MR. FISHER: Now, if they are on an 2 outpatient commitment and that were strengthened in 3 some way, one of the requirements is that they show
4 up at appointments. If they fail to do that, you 5 can bring them in. That's -- believe me, that will 6 have happened by the time that they are starting to 7 deteriorate in the way that you've described.

8 MR. SCHWOYER: How do you get that 9 outpatient committed based upon the evidence in the 10 scenario I just stated?

11 MR. FISHER: Well, what will happen is 12 a consequence of repeated prior 302's and 303's.
13 That is true. But doing it any other way, in our 14 opinion, in the Society's opinion, is leaning too 15 far toward coercion. And from a clinical 16 standpoint, clinical, I know that that isn't in my 17 patient's best interest.

18 MR. SCHWOYER: Representative Maitland
19 read from the beginning of the bill. I'm now 20 reading from the end of the bill where it talks
21 about the time frame. The involuntary commitment 22 shall not exceed 90 days. It talks about their full 23 consideration has been given to less restrictive
24 alternatives. Investigation of treatment 25 alternatives shall include consideration of the 1 person's relationship to his community and family,

2 his employment possibilities, all available
3 community resources. Chairman Maitland wishes to 4 add medication compliance and guardianship services.

5 If all of those things are fully 6 considered, isn't that where -- if a patient is not 7 taking it because of money or maybe alternative 8 medication available, that that behavior is not 9 necessarily consistent with the decompensating 10 mental illness, isn't that how this whole thing 11 works?

12 MR. FISHER: Let me show you another
13 perspective on this. Let's say that a psychiatrist 14 in a mental health interview determines that a 15 lesser level of care than involuntary inpatient 16 commitment is needed, testifies to that, and the 17 person goes out and nevertheless behaves in a 18 dangerous way. Don't you think a psychiatrist would 19 want to protect himself from that liability risk, 20 that potential malpractice suit? The point -- the 21 details aren't in what is clinically right at the 22 time. We're swayed by all sorts of things, too, 23 like potential risk and liability.

24 Nine times out of ten, if we think a 25 person wouldn't act in a dangerous way but were not

1 100 percent sure -- maybe I'm speaking only for 2 myself, but I would probably go with the most 3 restrictive because I don't want to take the chance 4 of danger.

5 I think that's what motivates this 6 legislation and I understand that. You want to 7 protect people. But when we do it through laws, 8 there's a very strong potential danger of limiting 9 people's rights.

10 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you. I know
11 that I get adversarial. It's very helpful.

12 MR. FISHER: That's fine.

13 MR. SCHWOYER: It helps to ask these 14 questions. It helps to know your perspective.

15 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Jane.

16 MS. MENDLOW: Dr. Fisher, you
17 mentioned that it was very important for a patient 18 to develop trust with the doctor and that that's 19 probably one of the main ingredients in successful 20 treatment.

21 I want to see if I understand. If the 22 situation where you have an individual who may not 23 have had an encounter with the mental health system 24 or even with the criminal justice system but seems 25 to be exhibiting a very marked change in behavior

1 that's noticeable by everyone and community and 2 professionals, explain to me how you feel that the 3 legislation, again, undermines the issue of trust.
4 The way it's written right now, it talks about 5 identifying a person who didn't have the capacity, 6 does not have the capacity, to make a rational 7 treatment decision.

8 I guess what I'm trying to understand 9 in a situation where someone perhaps does not have 10 any previous involvement but suddenly has because of 11 some drugs that are issued -- you know, it's not 12 always possible, I suppose, to look at the issue of 13 trust. Sometimes there has to be some intervention
14 before. So we have a situation sometimes where you 15 have had a longstanding history with the individual 16 and others where there has not been any contact 17 before. I would like to go back to this issue of 18 trust.

19 MR. FISHER: Excuse me. Could I 20 respond to that?

21 MS. MENDLOW: Sure.

22 MR. FISHER: It sounds like you are 23 going on to another issue. I want to respond to the 24 issue of the person who is clearly exhibiting mental 25 illness, poor judgment, unusual behavior and has

1 never been in the system before. How do we know 2 that that unusual behavior is going to lead to 3 dangerous behavior? The only basis for that would 4 be prior treatment, prior involuntary 5 hospitalization.

6 MS. MENDLOW: Right.

7 MR. FISHER: It's a right and a
8 privilege for a person to be eccentric, to do 9 unusual things, as long as they are not harmful to 10 somebody else or others.

11 MS. MENDLOW: Okay.

12 MR. FISHER: Now, if they are 13 dangerous, okay, we have defined it. And the Mental 14 Health Procedure Act as it exists now addresses that 15 so that first time break can be hospitalized. But 16 if the person is suffering from a mental illness 17 without harming anybody, or a nuisance maybe but 18 they are not harming anybody, is it right to force 19 treatment to assume that they will become 20 aggressive?

21 MS. MENDLOW: If they were delusional
22 and not in a situation where they are making 23 rational decisions, how can we talk about issues of 24 trust at that point when a person --

25 MR. FISHER: As far as I understand it

1 from the case you are giving, that's not even the 2 issue. They haven't even entered into treatment.
3 If the intent of this is to take anybody who is 4 acting in an eccentric, unusual way or even if they 5 have been diagnosed mentally ill and are not 6 dangerous now and are forced into treatment, that's 7 a very, very dangerous treading on people's 8 individual rights.

9 MS. MENDLOW: One more question. You 10 mentioned that there are situations you see where 11 family members are trying to exploit an individual 12 who is mentally disabled, and you are very concerned 13 that while this person may need to undergo some type 14 of treatment, the family members will take advantage 15 of their assets or make decisions that will wind up 16 detrimental to the patient.

17 Can you tell me whether you or others 18 would like to recommend to ensure the protection of 19 people from this exploitation? It borders on 20 criminal behavior but what can the mental health 21 system be doing?

22 MR. FISHER: That I don't know. It's 23 obviously criminal behavior. But one of the reasons 24 that we are discussing this matter is that the 25 mental ill aren't able to make decisions for

1 themselves. I mean, in other words, that person's 2 funds can be long depleted. We need to protect 3 their interest. It would be better if we could 4 protect them of the harm.

5 MS. MENDLOW: Some type of a guardian
6 to ensure this person's property or assets are 7 protected while under treatment, is that what you 8 mean?

9 MR. FISHER: Yes.

10 MS. MENDLOW: Just the issue of 11 treatment and your frustration with formularies, 12 etc., are these rules set by the Department of 13 Public Welfare or the Department of Health and Human 14 Services?

15 MR. FISHER: The Department of Welfare
16 in consultation with all sorts of experts.

17 MS. MENDLOW: Thank you.

18 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very 19 much for your testimony, Dr. Fisher. It was very 20 informative and very interesting.

21 MR. FISHER: Thank you for the 22 opportunity.

23 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: As usual, we are 24 running late. We will ask the next testifier, Mr.
25 Richard Jevon, to come forward.

1 MR. JEVON: I, too, found that 2 interesting. I thank you very much for the 3 opportunity to testify.

4 My name is Richard Jevon. I'm here
5 testifying as a private citizen, even though I am a 6 very active volunteer and serve on boards of several 7 organizations whose missions are directed towards 8 helping people and families who are affected by 9 serious mental illness. I'm a retired businessman, 10 34 years with Alcoa, 2 years with Allegheny Valley
11 School and 7 years with SMS Engineering.

12 My wife and I have two sons. The 13 older son is 45 years old and has suffered from 14 paranoid schizophrenia for about 27 years. He has 15 been involuntarily committed to a mental hospital 16 somewhere around 25 times. I lost track. For the 17 most part, I was the petitioner for at least 20 of 18 them. So it's sadly that I have become a lay expert 19 on 302 commitments.

20 We spent about the first 10 or 12
21 years as a family just coping by ourselves. And in 22 1987, I came out of the closet and began to educate 23 myself and others about the ravages of mental 24 illness and its impact on families. The first thing 25 I did was to read the 1976 Procedures Act on

1 commitments because I thought it should be easier to 2 commit a sick person.

3 Then I read the case law on the 4 subject. I began to believe that the law was a 5 pretty good balance between enabling the system to 6 commit for observation and treatment and protection 7 against abuses such as getting rid of obnoxious, 8 troublesome family members.

9 Remember, this was the era of Haldol
10 and Stelazine, and I had no real clue about the 11 impact of the meds or their side effects. I just 12 knew that the meds and the commitment calmed things 13 down and provided temporary peace. I did not know 14 about the side effects of these meds.

15 The next 15 years have afforded me an 16 enormous learning experience about serious mental 17 illnesses, our public system of behavioral 18 healthcare including the managed care as developed 19 in southwestern Pennsylvania. I learned that 20 interpretation and administration of the Procedures 21 Act varies widely across the state. Interpretations 22 of dangerousness vary considerably, and the passive 23 harm to self is not widely understood or used. It 24 is a very important concept.

25 Some of the things that I have learned

1 along the way include that until the person with 2 serious mental illness understands that they have an 3 illness and decides to cope with it, they cannot be 4 forced to treat it. To the uninitiated, forcing 5 treatment generally means making the person take an 6 anti-psychotic medication.

7 However, treatment is much more
8 complex than taking pills. Different people and 9 different diagnoses respond differently to different 10 medications. Some diagnoses do not yet have a 11 proven effective medicine. In addition to 12 medication, a wide array of treatment, service and 13 support actually define treatment. Effective use of 14 any and all of these vary from person to person.
15 Mandating treatment is meaningless, unless it is 16 tailored to the individual and the individual buys 17 in. Mandating treatment would also assume that the 18 full array of options is available to each person 19 suffering from serious mental illness.

20 Sometimes people with mental illness
21 know that their symptoms are getting worse but, 22 because of the symptoms, they cannot do what they 23 know they should do. Illustration: Symptoms are 24 worse and the individual knows it but can't go to 25 clinic or can't take meds or just act out. Many

1 times, in these circumstances, a change in 2 environment will enable return to the stabilizing
3 regimen. At times like these, a commitment to a 4 structured environment is the trigger needed to 5 enable the individual to resume treatment.

6 It is a very different circumstance
7 when a person is experiencing a first or second 8 episode compared to a tenth or twentieth. Mental 9 illness tends to be episodic, and symptoms can 10 moderate and then become exacerbated. Various 11 environmental conditions such as stress, change in 12 living arrangements, irregular eating can lead to 13 one or the other condition.

14 I think both commitment and treatment
15 should recognize whether or not the illness is new 16 or a return of previously experienced symptoms and 17 behaviors. As an illustration, a family member of a 18 suicidal consumer recently reported verbal behavior 19 similar to that which preceded numerous previous 20 actual attempts, but the individual had not yet 21 actually done anything in furtherance. To me, 22 history strongly suggests the need for commitment 23 and evaluation and the presentation of treatment
24 options. However, forcing treatment is really a 25 second issue.

1 When is a person considered dangerous?
2 In recent years, there has been considerable 3 research into violence and mental illness. Dr.
4 Edward Mulvey of WPIC has been very involved in such 5 research. I refer you to experts such as Dr.
6 Mulvey, but I believe he will say that accurate 7 prediction of violence is not possible.

8 However, based on our family member's 9 history, I think that history and the totality of 10 circumstances are excellent and reliable indicators 11 of the need for commitment and evaluation. In 12 essence, the commitment is also for assurance of an 13 environment conducive to treatment but stops short 14 of restraining an individual and forcing medication.

15 I also acknowledge that a confined 16 environment for a person suffering severe paranoia
17 will be controversial and objected to by many. I 18 know of one individual who has lived on the streets 19 for years and does and would vehemently object to 20 commitment. In his case, the totality of 21 circumstances and history does not reveal danger.

22 Some of the specifics of House Bill 23 2374: Section 102, I see deletion of the need is 24 great and its and the insertion of treatment as 25 minor changes clarifying intent. I have no

1 objection.

2 Section 104 I am concerned about the 3 insertion of to protect a person from predictable 4 deterioration in two places. The issues are who 5 does the predicting and what is the role of the 6 individual's history. Without further 7 identification of the individual making the 8 prediction, there is no assurance of the validity of 9 the predicted deterioration. For first or early 10 episodes, prediction can only be based on large data 11 base information and may not be at all applicable to 12 the individual in question. On line 12 of what I 13 think is page 2, insertion of or maintain is good.

14 Section 301, identification of persons
15 who may be subject to involuntary emergency 16 examination and treatment. Three issues are 17 embodied in person or with cruelty on an animal, or 18 that the person has intentionally caused significant 19 damage to substantial property of another person.
20 Person is simply clarifying language. Cruelty on an 21 animal is objectionable to me. I'm aware that this 22 is a danger signal for children, but I don't recall 23 its being a symptom of any serious and persistent 24 mental illness. I am an animal lover but suspect 25 this would be a manifestation of some other behavior

1 problem.

2 Intentional significant damage to 3 substantial property of another person is a 4 problematic statement to me. There could be 5 situations in which the damage is not significant 6 but the behavior fits the need for commitment.
7 Conversely, the causing of damage is not necessarily 8 a manifestation of mental illness. I would rather 9 stay with the dangerousness to self or others 10 including passive danger.

11 Deletion of threats of harm and has 12 committed acts in furtherance of the threat to 13 commit harm is good with the insertion that follows.
14 Insertion of one or more threats of harm and the 15 totality of circumstances supports a finding of 16 danger is good. Still in 301, Section (2)(1), 17 deletion of physical in the description of serious 18 debilitation is good.

19 Insertion of new Section (2)(1) is not 20 good. It is the forced medication issue and there 21 are several ramifications to this. What is the 22 medication? Is it the cheapest? Has the individual 23 ever satisfactorily used the medication before?
24 What are the side effects? And, finally, there is 25 the issue of individual freedom. Many cases would

1 be satisfactorily resolved if the individual is 2 committed and sheltered in an environment conducive 3 to treatment and if the treating personnel have the 4 time and ability to persuade the person to try the 5 medicine.

6 Changes to Section (2)(11) are good.
7 Deletion of threats to commit suicide and has 8 committed acts in furtherance of the threat to 9 commit suicide, followed by the insertion of one or 10 more threats to commit suicide and the totality of 11 circumstances, supports a conclusion that there is a 12 risk of a suicide attempt, is good.

13 I forget which one of you folks asked
14 about phone calls. I volunteer many hours each year 15 and we get calls. And within the past month, I was 16 talking to a young woman, a master student at PIT 17 whose mother has a history of suicide attempts. She 18 was saying the things she had said at the time of 19 the previous attempts but she had not committed an 20 act in furtherance. I think it's important to look 21 at the totality of circumstances and, there again, 22 history to me would be very, very important there.

23 We do get a lot of calls. You asked
24 about calls from people. What do I do? There is no 25 magic answer. Those are tough calls. We get them.

1 We do get calls like that all the time.

2 Section 304, medication compliance. I
3 would say that that's the major cause for our son's
4 repeated hospitalizations. I find it very difficult 5 to think about restraining him and forcing the 6 medication. The doctor referred to the injectables.
7 We have had pretty good luck in the past 15 years 8 with his medication because it was an injectable and 9 we worked out an agreement where he would get his 10 meds or else I wouldn't buy him cigarettes. Sounds 11 kind of elementary and crude but it worked. We are 12 kind of beyond that now. Just to put flat
13 medication compliance, how do you know? Do you 14 count the pills? Do they take them? Do they throw 15 them out? People with mental illness are not by 16 definition dumb. Our son is quite smart. They can 17 figure out the system.

18 In summary, I do believe there are 19 some fundamental flaws in House Bill 2374. I do 20 believe forced treatment does not work. It can 21 afford temporary rest, but the treatment leading to 22 recovery does require participation by the consumer.
23 Forced medication treatment, I think, is a proposed 24 quick fix for a system that is deficient in outreach 25 and the full range of support, including clinical 1 accountability for clients.

2 I believe that permitting an 3 individual's history and totality of circumstances
4 to be considered would enable people with serious 5 and persistent mental illness to access earlier when 6 their symptoms are exacerbating.

7 Thank you. I would be happy to carry 8 on discussion.

9 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you for your 10 testimony, Mr. Jevon. I particularly liked you 11 going through it section by section making 12 recommendations of things you like and didn't like.
13 That's helpful to us as we go along.

14 Are there any questions?
15 Representative Stevenson?

16 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Not at this 17 time.

18 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Mr. Schwoyer.

19 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you for your 20 testimony. I don't have any questions because, as 21 Chairman Maitland said, your section by section 22 explanation of where you are at helps a lot. I was 23 commenting to Chairman Maitland during your 24 testimony that I'll take another look at the 25 language on top of page 5, because I wasn't reading

1 that as medication, forcing medication compliance 2 language.

3 MR. JEVON: That's an interesting view
4 of the elephant. People in the office always kid me 5 and I say, what view of the elephant do you have?

6 MR. SCHWOYER: I'll take a look at 7 that. Do you have the language bill in front of 8 you?

9 MR. JEVON: Yes.

10 MR. SCHWOYER: On line 4, if there was 11 a period inserted after the word days and the 12 remainder of that line were struck, would that make 13 it better or worse in your opinion?

14 MR. JEVON: Give me a moment, please, 15 to read it.

16 MR. SCHWOYER: Sure.

17 MR. JEVON: I think what you are 18 suggesting is that if that paragraph or section read 19 only if the person acts in such a way as to evidence 20 the person does not have the capacity to make 21 rational treatment decision, and serious physical or 22 mental debilitation would ensue within 30 days. On 23 the surface, I would say that's a great improvement, 24 but I'd want to back up and see what the precursors 25 to that would be.

1 MR. SCHWOYER: Okay.

2 MR. JEVON: It's certainly an
3 improvement. Whether I would then say, no, I don't 4 object at all, I need to go back and see how it gets 5 set up by the prior sections.

6 MR. SCHWOYER: If you have an 7 opportunity to think about that, I would appreciate 8 your thoughts.

9 MR. JEVON: I would be happy to.

10 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you.

11 MR. JEVON: You're welcome, sir.

12 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Ms. Mendlow.

13 MS. MENDLOW: No.

14 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you, Mr.
15 Jevon. We really appreciate your testimony.

16 MR. JEVON: Thank you very much.

17 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Next we have Mrs.
18 Susan Meckley attending with us today. She traveled 19 the furthest today. She traveled about 15 miles 20 further than I did.

21 MS. MECKLEY: Good morning. I
22 certainly appreciate being here.

23 I heard the words being forced used
24 pretty much in everyone's testimony this morning. I 25 would like you to keep that word in your mind as you

1 listen to what I would like to testify to.

2 Our situation has been going on for 14
3 years. And I'd also like to say that our situation
4 deals with how a mentally ill person has affected
5 the life of our daughter. Some people call it 6 stalking but because he is mentally ill -- and 7 that's why I am here -- I would like you to keep 8 that in mind.

9 The testimony that I provided gives 10 pretty much everything that I brought with me today, 11 except possibly those who had the testimony given 12 earlier do not have the last page.

13 When I tell you for 14 years this has 14 been ongoing, I would like you to look at the last 15 page which is dated July 26th, 2002. This would be 16 our last letter from this man. If you don't have 17 it, it's over in the new copies that I brought today 18 because it was just sent to us. We received it two 19 days ago. This is proof of what I'm trying to tell 20 you can go on and on and on, what you might think is 21 one little letter or two little letters or a year
22 out of your life or two years out of your life. I
23 would like you to look at the broad scope of this 14
24 years to the date of July 26th, 2002.

25 Our daughter was friends to a young

1 boy in her school. We did not know at the time that 2 this boy had a mental illness. We thought she was 3 just being kind to a boy that didn't have very many 4 friends, couldn't make many friends, and didn't get 5 along well in school at all. We admired her for 6 this.

7 Sometime later this boy turned her
8 friendship into what he thought was a love affair.
9 He came to visit our homes many times. My husband 10 took him home. We befriended him as well.

11 Sometime later, my brother contacted 12 me with the fact that he had been given a threat by 13 this young man. He at the time didn't know who he 14 was. He also put together the threat and the 15 letters he had been receiving demanding money, 16 prestige. This man looked up to people who he 17 thought were in power, who he thought had money and 18 he deserved it. And he wanted to use the people 19 that had it to ensure the fact that he would get it.

20 My brother came to our house and our 21 daughter came down and said, I know that 22 handwriting. We took it to the police. The police 23 brought this young man and his family in for an 24 interview. We could have pressed charges. And I
25 don't mean to be condescending, but we did feel

1 sorry for them. And this is no offense on previous 2 testimony. I don't mean this is where you're at.
3 But we did have sympathy for this family and we felt 4 for them so we did not press charges.

5 This family said that they would keep 6 us in contact, what his progress was, where he was, 7 that they were seeking treatment for his 8 schizophrenia, that he would be committed as soon as 9 possible. All this ended the day we walked out of 10 the police station. The parents no longer had 11 contact with us. But it didn't end with this man.

12 All this time he continues to write 13 letters. As you can read the letters that I have 14 submitted are just a small portion of the many, many 15 letters that we receive all the time. I'd like you 16 to think about what this takes out of a young girl's 17 life, her family's life. I would like you to think 18 about why should she be a victim of a mentally ill 19 person. She didn't ask for this. She showed 20 kindness. All she wanted to be was a good person.
21 But for 14 years this very week, she is still paying 22 for being a nice person.

23 We are told that if he would stay on 24 his drugs, if he takes his prescriptions, that a lot 25 of this would never have to be. There has to be

1 some merit in being forced to take medication. We 2 know that medication is a serious part of treatment 3 of the mentally ill as well as it is of the 4 physically ill. How then can we say that not 5 forcing someone to seek medical attention through 6 drugs is not necessary? I don't know how you would 7 implement this. But I believe this has to be at 8 least a root to getting to how we are going to solve 9 at least part of these problems.

10 It's no use addressing why the law
11 does not come into effect with us. We've dealt with 12 case workers. This young man went on to be 13 committed. We've dealt with his case workers.
14 We've dealt with the mental health people. They 15 speak to us only hypothetically because once you are 16 out of the state hospital, the victims, the people 17 that he is threatening, the people that he's 18 harassing, the people that he's stalking, they are 19 no longer contacted. You are contacted as a 20 victims' list while he's in the hospital. Once he 21 is released to a halfway house, he is then thought 22 to be able to lead his normal life even though his 23 victim is not allowed to lead her normal life.

24 I still think that this bill would 25 help to at least solve some of these problems that

1 we have with these dangerously, dangerously mentally 2 ill people.

3 I also heard the testimony from the 4 doctor on the unpleasant side effects. I heard 5 about rights being taken away, that we can't 6 physically force a person to go into the hospital.
7 But when that person takes away the rights of 8 someone else, then, in my opinion, they would have 9 two choices. They are incarcerated or go to a 10 mental hospital to seek treatment. These would be 11 their only choices.

12 My daughter, my family, should not 13 have to deal with this the rest of her life to be 14 told to go and seek a new identity, to move out of 15 the state. She shouldn't have to do this. She 16 shouldn't have to be afraid in her own home. We 17 should not have to put in thousands of dollars of 18 security systems to protect her from something she 19 had no part in. The system, the government, has to 20 help to protect these innocent people.

21 Thank you very much.

22 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you, Mrs.
23 Meckley.

24 Representative Stevenson, any 25 questions?

1 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: I'm going
2 to reserve my thoughts. Not at this time, thank 3 you, other than to say, thank you for your testimony 4 because it is exactly, I think, what this bill is 5 trying to solve.

6 MS. MECKLEY: Yes, it is.

7 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Mrs. Meckley, when 8 we first talked we discussed the possibility of 9 prosecuting this fellow under the stalking law.

10 Can you tell us a little bit about 11 your thoughts on that and how that developed with 12 you?

13 MS. MECKLEY: I didn't know how much I 14 was supposed to speak on the stalking law because 15 this is not the bill that takes issue with that.
16 During the course, we have met with many lawyers and 17 personally-paid lawyers, former district attorneys.
18 All the local police know of our daughter's 19 situation and are on the lookout for her.

20 They've all suggested restraining
21 orders. The restraining orders work to a point 22 where you have someone who can completely
23 rationalize the problem that they are in. In other 24 words, if I do something wrong, I am going to be 25 prosecuted for this; therefore, I'm not going to do

1 this.

2 When you are dealing with a mentally 3 ill person who is delusional, who sees figures, who 4 sees red people coming at him, you think about how 5 is he going to make sense of a piece of paper that 6 tells him to stay away from my daughter's home. He 7 isn't going to. So what we are told is the first 8 offense gets recorded. The second offense gets a 9 warning. The third offense might get him 30 days, 10 possibly, not likely. The fourth offense would then 11 probably lead to a 90-day incarceration and/or 12 mental facility.

13 The mental health people suggest to us 14 that he is still living in the state that he was 15 when he was 16 years old, that he has chosen to stay 16 there because this is a comfortable place for him.
17 He does not recognize the fact that my daughter is 18 married. He still sends her letters to my home, not 19 to her home. She thinks that to send him this kind 20 of letter, this kind of demand, would possibly send 21 him over the edge. And she said, do you want to 22 take that chance that where he is at you can deal 23 with him; where he is going to go, you can't deal 24 with him.

25 He has made threats. He's made many

1 threats. Money is nothing. We don't care about the 2 money. It's when the letters come and they say,
3 I've given you enough chances. I've given you 4 enough. This is your last chance. You meet me at 5 so and so or you're going to pay. I'm going to get 6 even. The next paragraph he might say, you are 7 still the love of my life. I can't live without 8 you.

9 This is where the law is for us. It's 10 no good. They can't arrest him until he hurts her.
11 Is that what we have to wait for because he is going 12 to go -- read his last two letters. He is going to 13 go. He has been without medication. He's been 14 without a halfway house now for almost four years.
15 And the letters are coming constantly. And you can 16 read in his letters as much as they have 17 similarities, they also have an escalation of his 18 problems, of his paranoia, of his delusions. You 19 can read it. You can feel it.

20 That's where the law is for us. There 21 is no law. He can threaten her. He can demand 22 money. There is no law to arrest him for this.

23 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: When we spoke 24 before, you really conveyed to me the sense of how 25 you feel trapped by this.

1 MS. MECKLEY: Yes.

2 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Can you describe
3 for the panel here a little bit about how you would 4 feel when your daughter would be late or you would 5 not get a phone call?

6 MS. MECKLEY: Absolutely. When it was 7 time for her to go away to school, we had to look 8 into all the colleges that had the best security 9 systems. We had to find roommates whose parents 10 were willing to let them live with her.

11 She carried mace with her. She 12 carried a paint gun with her. She went nowhere by 13 herself. We took her everywhere. She was not 14 allowed to go anywhere by herself. We didn't allow 15 it. If she went anywhere, we had to know when she 16 arrived, when she was going to come home.

17 When she got married, the biggest 18 thing on our list for the wedding day was security.
19 Where is he? What's he going to do when he finds 20 this out? Rumors are rumors. My daughter is best 21 friends with his brother, odd as it may seem. But 22 we knew he was going to find out.

23 We were very lucky on that day that a 24 dear friend came to us and said, he's back in the 25 hospital. You don't have to worry this day. What a

1 blessing that was for her that day.

2 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Right.

3 MS. MECKLEY: Since then, she has 4 gotten a home. We got more and more and more 5 letters that says he is going to find her, he's 6 going to get her.

7 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Right.

8 MS. MECKLEY: We had a security system
9 put in. Our name is on the alarm. We were coming 10 home from Harrisburg one day. We got a phone call 11 from the alarm system, from the security system, 12 that said the alarm is going off and your daughter 13 is home. We couldn't reach her. We didn't know 14 what would happen. The estimated time of arrival 15 for the police to our house is 12 minutes.

16 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I see.

17 MS. MECKLEY: What do you think can 18 happen in 12 minutes? Are we afraid? We are 19 constantly afraid. Do we ever want her to be alone?
20 No, but she's a grown-up woman. She's got a good 21 job. She's got a good life. If only we could help 22 her with this part of her life. It affects 23 everyone. It literally affects everyone.

24 We have people calling us all the 25 time. Did you see that black car on so and so's

1 road? That could be it. You better check it out.
2 Our local police are wonderful. They check things
3 out for us all the time, even though there's nothing 4 they can do. They want to help us. This is how we 5 live.

6 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Over the past 14
7 years, have you noticed a predictable pattern of 8 hospitalizations, perhaps while he is treated you 9 don't hear from him and then the deterioration 10 begins?

11 MS. MECKLEY: Yes, absolutely. When 12 he is in the hospital he is not allowed to write, so 13 his mail is censored. When he is in the hospital, 14 we don't receive any mail.

15 Again, when they let him go home for 16 holidays, that's when we start to see the mail 17 again. This man has certain holidays and dates in 18 his mind. If you read the last letter -- before the 19 very last letter, he's talking about a seven-year
20 time period and then another seven years. I 21 suffered seven years, don't make me suffer seven 22 more.

23 He always puts things -- he always 24 paraphrases things and always puts things like into 25 a category whereas Valentine's Day, Christmas, his

1 birthday now is coming up which is a huge deal. He 2 has invited her to meet him. He's even telling her 3 what he wants her to wear, to bring $100,000 in 4 cashier's checks and $100,000 in bills, hundreds, 5 twenties and fives. This is the kind of thing that 6 we go back to all the time.

7 I have noticed patterns. I do think 8 that when he was in the halfway houses and was 9 receiving his treatment in the halfway houses, 10 because apparently they can't go out unless they 11 take their meds, we would go six months without a 12 letter, maybe even longer at times. Definitely when 13 he was in the hospital we didn't hear from him. He 14 wasn't allowed.

15 Yes, I definitely notice a difference.

16 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: It might not be 17 fair to ask you, but do you know if he has ever been 18 incarcerated because of his conduct related to his 19 illness?

20 MS. MECKLEY: I know that he was in 21 juvenile hall when he was very young, but I do not 22 know of any other incarceration or any kind of -- he 23 states in his letters all the time that he's in huge 24 trouble. What that means, I don't know.

25 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: And do you believe

1 if House Bill 2374 were law today that you would be 2 willing to petition for his involuntary commitment, 3 and if the judge looked at the totality of the 4 circumstances and ordered forced treatment even on 5 an outpatient basis, that your situation would be 6 greatly improved?

7 MS. MECKLEY: I do indeed.

8 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very
9 much.

10 MS. MECKLEY: I really do. Thank you.

11 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Mr. Schwoyer.

12 MR. SCHWOYER: I just wanted to 13 comment. I read your prepared remarks. One of the 14 things that struck me was your comments about 15 whenever you tried to find out information about him
16 and his illness and the status, speaking 17 hypothetically, it's confidential and you're not 18 allowed to know.

19 MS. MECKLEY: Right.

20 MR. SCHWOYER: And you're not allowed 21 to know what kind of a vehicle he drives, the make 22 and model that he might drive. Yet he somehow seems 23 to find out when your daughter is getting married 24 and where you live.

25 MS. MECKLEY: Exactly. The only

1 reason that I know that he had previously been in a 2 black car is he came to my house. I dealt with him
3 face-to-face. It wasn't nice. It wasn't nice.

4 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you.

5 MS. MECKLEY: You're welcome.

6 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Ms. Mendlow.

7 MS. MENDLOW: Ms. Meckley, can you
8 tell us if anyone in the mental health system -- and 9 this would be in which county?

10 MS. MECKLEY: Adams County.

11 MS. MENDLOW: Adams County. If anyone 12 has any additional insights as far as psychiatric 13 treatment for this young man. It seems that he 14 certainly has had treatment and sometimes it's been 15 successful. I was just wondering if anyone has 16 really done the homework to look at why things have 17 broken down and why he has not been consistent and 18 if anyone, an expert, has been called in to take a 19 second look at this, his entire case, because of 20 these threats to your daughter and your family.

21 MS. MECKLEY: If there is a suggestion
22 on how I would go about doing that, I would 23 certainly be willing to do that. I have spoken to 24 his case workers. I have contacted the Mental 25 Health Association in Adams County and in York

1 County. They tell me that they can give me no
2 information. They can take my information, possibly 3 use it, possibly not use it.

4 MS. MENDLOW: I guess what I'm 5 wondering is have you not heard anyone say, we have 6 decided based on the seriousness of this case and 7 how it's affecting your family, that we have 8 initiated something and that we are taking a second 9 look at what is going wrong to see if there is 10 something else that we can do further.

11 I don't know that there's a magic 12 bullet, but I was just wondering if anybody has 13 expressed the initiative to at least do some more 14 detail work on this, because perhaps there is some 15 additional intervention to help provide more 16 consistency in taking his medication.

17 MS. MECKLEY: Each time I speak to 18 someone at the Mental Health Association, it's 19 pretty much the same conversation over and over 20 again.

21 MS. MENDLOW: I see.

22 MS. MECKLEY: It's not that they don't 23 believe me. It's not that I don't have documented 24 proof. They certainly get all my letters, copies of 25 the letters.

1 MS. MENDLOW: I see.

2 MS. MECKLEY: But what they are saying
3 is that their hands are tied to commit him. Until 4 he does harm to himself or to someone else, physical 5 harm, they cannot commit him to the hospital.

6 MS. MENDLOW: Right.

7 MS. MECKLEY: Now, the previous times
8 that he was committed, it's my understanding he 9 tried to commit suicide or at least intimated that 10 he was going to. Those are the reasons that he was 11 previously in the hospital. But they tell me that 12 this is not -- until he harms someone --

13 MS. MENDLOW: You were probably here
14 when Dr. Fisher testified.

15 MS. MECKLEY: I was.

16 MS. MENDLOW: The importance of trust
17 and that that was a key aspect. For that reason, I 18 guess I would very much be interested in seeing if 19 anyone could take a second look and see if he has 20 built up some kind of trust with a psychiatrist or 21 mental health professional.

22 And as far as the issue of release of 23 information, confidential information, I'm not sure 24 that that is going to be the result of this 25 legislation, but I still am interested in seeing if

1 that part of the system could work to look at where 2 trust had broken down, where treatment had broken 3 down, what can be done.

4 MS. MECKLEY: Absolutely.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very
6 much for your testimony, Mrs. Meckley.

7 MS. MECKLEY: Thank you.

8 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I would like to 9 welcome our colleague Don Walko from downtown 10 Pittsburgh.

11 Don, thanks for joining us.

12 REPRESENTATIVE WALKO: Thank you.

13 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Next we have 14 Mr. John Voron. Good morning.

15 MR. VORON: Good morning. I am John
16 Voron. I'm a consumer of mental health services. I 17 thank you for this opportunity to give testimony on 18 House Bill 2374. I think this legislation has the 19 potential to have a direct impact upon myself.

20 I would like to start out by sharing 21 some background information on myself. I first 22 started having symptoms in 1981 when I was 21 years
23 old. Some of these symptoms were racing thoughts.
24 I was delusional. I experienced -- I thought that I
25 had special powers connected to God.

1 These symptoms became so severe that I
2 voluntarily sought out medical attention. I was 3 placed in a voluntary psychiatric facility. I was 4 put on heavy doses of psychotropic medications, 5 Mellaril and Haldol, to control symptoms. Within 6 six months, however, I could no longer tolerate the 7 side effects so I quit taking the medication. And 8 as other consumers like myself had a severe return
9 of symptoms, I was involuntary committed to Torrance
10 State Hospital. I was given different medications
11 at this time and continued on Haldol, but added 12 Thorazine and Lithium.

13 At this time, my wife left me. She 14 was told by the doctors after the first week of my 15 hospitalization that I would probably not be 16 released for up to a year's time and I would not be 17 normal again. I was fortunate this time not to lose 18 my job on the railroad, but the stigma that I had 19 felt as a result of being in a state hospital was 20 unbearable. The side effects that I had were heavy 21 twitches and involuntary movements from the 22 medications.

23 When I voiced my concerns about these 24 symptoms to the doctor, the doctor said to me, it's 25 better than being in the hospital, isn't it? So

1 what I did this time was I adjusted my medication
2 myself on my own. I took just Lithium with small 3 doses of Haldol. Although you may think this was 4 wrong, I felt I had no medical support.
5 Fortunately, for three years this did work, my 6 adjustments in medication. And I remember this as 7 being like the best three years of my life.

8 But, unfortunately, in 1986, I had 9 another psychotic episode which landed me in 10 Torrance Hospital again for three months. At this 11 time, I was placed on an outpatient commitment for 12 up to four years. I had no choice at this time but 13 to take my prescribed medications which had a toll 14 on my physical well-being at this time.

15 I cycled in and out of the hospital
16 many times, and I even had bouts of violence due to 17 my psychosis. I'm telling you all this because I
18 feel that I'm exactly the type of person that you 19 are talking about when you propose changes to the 20 Mental Health Procedures Act.

21 However, I would like to tell you what 22 made a difference in my life, things that I think 23 can improve the Mental Health System and help other 24 people like myself.

25 The thing that made a biggest

1 difference in my life in coming to understand that I
2 need to be on medications has been the peer recovery
3 movement. When I moved to Greensburg, PA, in 1993,
4 shortly after I got married, I met a group of people 5 who were dually diagnosed.

6 I found the support I needed and I was 7 able to come to terms with my side effects. I 8 helped to educate myself and understand that support 9 groups helped to support other people. I also 10 became a member of the Pennsylvania Mental Health 11 Consumers' Association, and I felt empowered because 12 I felt that I wasn't alone, that there were 13 thousands like me.

14 Having choice. For so many years, I
15 didn't know -- because I was on the access card -- 16 that I could find another psychiatrist to have 17 someone treat me. That was an important part of my 18 treatment, that someone could understand me that I
19 could talk to, that I could trust, that I wasn't 20 stuck with a specific psychiatrist. My peer support 21 group helped me learn differently. Finding the 22 right doctor was one of the biggest steps in my 23 recovery. I considered this important in my overall 24 recovery. I also wasn't made aware for so many 25 years that there were good programs that I could

1 access, and that there was peer support, and a focus 2 on recovery.

3 Finding good aftercare treatment
4 options. After years of not having effective 5 follow-up services, I became involved with some 6 great aftercare treatment. Some of these were a 7 mobile psychiatric nurse, a great case manager, and 8 my bipolar support group.

9 Being able to use my experience and 10 skills to help others is also a great thing. For 11 the past couple of years I have been employed in the 12 mental health field. I first started out as a 13 consumer satisfaction team member where my job was 14 to go around and serve consumers and give them a 15 voice and find out where the services were.

16 I was a mobile drug and alcohol
17 counselor and was able to stay sober and help others
18 who were going through the same struggles. Now I'm 19 an empowerment specialist where I travel throughout 20 western Pennsylvania educating consumers on the 21 possibilities of recovery, and giving them the 22 empowerment through the recovery process.

23 I found that through years of being in 24 recovery, recovery isn't just about medication
25 alone. I know now, through having a good

1 psychiatrist, from learning from other consumers
2 that I must practice self-care. This is 3 empowerment. I must report changes immediately to 4 my doctor, learn to relax and be good to myself by 5 getting proper nutrition, sleep, exercise; and I
6 must attend my support groups and reach out and help 7 others which, in turn, helps my recovery.

8 The commitment process that currently 9 is in place has helped when it has needed to.
10 However, when I was in the commitment process back 11 in the '80s, it was so stressful because I didn't 12 have the right doctors in place at the time. If I 13 had to experience constant forced treatment, I feel 14 as I would have tried to stay away from mental 15 health treatment at all costs.

16 Mental health consumers need to be 17 assured that good treatment and rehabilitation 18 programs are available to them, and that they have 19 good doctors and workers that they have voluntary 20 access to these needed services. In too many 21 communities, there are not good systems of 22 treatment, rehabilitation and support available for 23 them. People in our state can't get the good 24 programs.

25 However, there are good laws that

1 mental health workers can get to them such as mobile
2 therapy and mobile rehabilitation. These services
3 are not available the way they should be. They also 4 need to be aware of peer support, of the possibility 5 of recovery.

6 The way this legislation is perceived
7 is that there is no hope of recovery, that once 8 diagnosed, we will always be so sick that we will 9 never be able to make judgments or decisions for 10 ourselves. This is a mistake that will strip us of 11 hope, which studies have found is the most important 12 part of the recovery process.

13 We shouldn't have to get so sick that 14 we get beyond the point of recognizing ourselves
15 that we need more structured help. Years ago, I
16 used to be able to go to the ER before I became a 17 threat to myself or someone else, and just get help 18 for a couple days and avoid a long-term 19 hospitalization or commitment. I guess now because 20 of managed care, I can't do that. I feel that that 21 is a disservice to myself and the system.

22 Psychiatric advance directives are 23 something that can be very helpful to address the 24 concerns that this panel has. I know that I can go 25 to my doctor and have a document prepared, and I can

1 know the things that when the red flags come up in 2 my illness I can avoid a hospitalization or 3 commitment process and not have the doctor start 4 from square one.

5 Finally, pass true mental health
6 parity. I've been able to graduate from college and 7 sustain full-time employment long after the doctors 8 told me I wouldn't be able to do these things. To 9 be able to continue to be a functioning, tax-paying, 10 voting member of society, I need to have ongoing 11 treatment for my illness. It's hard for me to 12 understand how this legislation recognizes mental 13 illness as an illness, yet it is not recognized as 14 an illness when it comes to private insurance 15 coverage. I know that we are not talking about 16 mental health parity here, but I had to put that 17 plug in.

18 I hope my testimony has helped you to 19 understand that even those who are considered 20 hopelessly ill and beyond the ability to ever make 21 judgments and decisions for ourselves and experience 22 recovery, are truly able to manage our illnesses and 23 live constructive lives where we contribute 24 positively to our communities. We need to ensure 25 that there is effective voluntary treatment to be

1 accessed by those in need. Mental health consumers
2 shouldn't have to go through the commitment process
3 to be well.

4 One thing I wanted to add was when the 5 doctor was talking this morning -- when you're in a 6 hospital, the commitment process -- you're so under 7 -- when you're under a commitment, you are not there 8 for recovery. You just want to get out. You are so 9 focused on just getting out. You are not there for 10 recovery. The times that I've been in the hospital 11 for a voluntary procedure, I was there for recovery, 12 able to work with the doctor, talk about my 13 medications.

14 However, when I was in there under 15 commitment, I was so focused just talking to my 16 attorney, wanting to get out. I was focused on 17 getting out. I want there about recovery.

18 Are there any questions?

19 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very
20 much for your testimony, Mr. Voron.

21 Any questions? Representative
22 Stevenson.

23 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: It's great
24 to see the system works in terms of your recovery.
25 Unfortunately, there's a lot of different facettes

1 to mental illness, quite frankly. This has been 2 very educational for me today. It's not an easy 3 issue at all. I've had very little contact over the 4 years, in the six years I've been a state
5 representative, other than people from my district
6 that have loved ones suffering from mental illness
7 who basically talk to me about the mental health 8 parity issue, and I've signed on to the bill because 9 of that, trying to fight for that.

10 MR. VORON: Great. I'm glad to hear
11 that.

12 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: We still 13 have instances that we have to solve. And you were 14 here. You heard Susan Meckley's testimony.

15 MR. VORON: I did. That's sad. It's 16 very sad.

17 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: The system
18 has let her down and let her daughter down. We have 19 to try to balance the needs, the government's need 20 to protect people. It's a health, safety and 21 welfare issue versus, I think, to a certain extent, 22 the person's right to self-determination. But more 23 importantly what I'm hearing is the proper method of 24 treatment.

25 I hear from you -- and you have been

1 through it -- and I think your testimony made a
2 bigger impact on me than the doctor's. You made a 3 statement that had you been forced to do this stuff, 4 it wouldn't have had the same impact. You just 5 decided that this is the way you had to go for 6 recovery and you did it. I give you a heck of a lot 7 of credit for that.

8 MR. VORON: Thank you.

9 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: We still -- 10 I go back to the issue, we still have loopholes in 11 the law that we have to try to close to help people 12 like Ms. Meckley's daughter.

13 MR. VORON: Right.

14 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: And we have 15 to work together. We need your help. We need the 16 doctors' help, too, as Representative Maitland said 17 to improve the bill. Something has to come out of 18 this to protect society from individuals that, for 19 whatever reason, can't see that they need help.

20 MR. VORON: I think one of the things 21 that bothers me about the bill is the fact that when 22 you see a psychiatrist once every four to six weeks 23 for ten minutes, he has the power to say you might 24 do something in the future. We need to commit you.
25 That bothers me a little bit.

1 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: Well, thank
2 you. I really don't have anything else.

3 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Don?

4 REPRESENTATIVE WALKO: No.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Mike?

6 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you for coming 7 today.

8 MR. VORON: Sure.

9 MR. SCHWOYER: You are not the first 10 person that talked about forced medication and 11 forced treatment. When I read House Bill 2374, what 12 it says to me is that it's adding an additional 13 criteria to form the basis of the court -- someone 14 being able to enter an order about somebody on 15 whether -- I don't see necessarily the strapping 16 down on a table and injecting medication as 17 something that I think I contemplate being done with 18 this bill, if this legislation were law.

19 What I've always thought, and if you 20 can help me or correct my ill thinking or confirm my 21 belief, is if this were the law, an individual 22 wouldn't have to get to the point where you got 23 where you became a danger to yourself or others
24 prior to the forced hospitalization that got you 25 back on track and helped you to meet other people

1 and help you to understand your illness better, so 2 that you would better self-monitor and make 3 intelligent decisions about yourself.

4 MR. VORON: I feel that the current 5 commitment laws achieve that.

6 MR. SCHWOYER: And there would be -- 7 Okay. I just -- the stories and the examples of the 8 consumers who I have witnessed firsthand, it almost 9 seemed to me almost cruel to make them -- have them 10 wait until they decompensated to the state where 11 they became a danger to themselves or others before 12 we were able to do -- we could have done what we did 13 at that point weeks or perhaps months earlier and 14 just kind of helped them to get back on track.

15 MR. VORON: Why can't we do it on a 16 voluntary basis where you have somebody be able to 17 go to a hospital before they deteriorate?

18 MR. SCHWOYER: I think you are right.

19 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Yeah. The law
20 even says voluntary treatment shall be preferable.

21 MR. VORON: Yeah. I mean, you can't 22 walk into a hospital now and say, look, I'm a little 23 bit depressed right now. And they're going to say, 24 are you suicidal? And you can honestly say, not 25 yet. And they'll say, well you go home until you do

1 become suicidal. That's what they'll say to you.
2 Honest to God, that's what they'll say to you.

3 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Well --

4 MR. VORON: Unless you're a threat to 5 yourself or others, you can't get into a hospital
6 nowadays. It's sad.

7 MR. SCHWOYER: I totally understand
8 what you are saying. I still struggle and look 9 forward to talking to other members of the committee 10 about those individuals who don't recognize or 11 haven't yet figured out how to --

12 MR. VORON: You mentioned that you
13 thought there were two different types of consumers.
14 I think maybe that was true back when you had the 15 harsher medications. Now that you -- I think you
16 have the A-typical medications, I don't think you 17 see that as much anymore. I see a lot of people and 18 I'm in contact with a lot of consumers in my 19 business, and I don't see as much as you're 20 explaining. I really don't. I mean, maybe 10, 15
21 years ago it was like that when you had the harsh 22 side effects, but now with the A-typical medications 23 and as the doctor was saying you get these 24 formularies straightened out, I mean, and you can 25 get people on the right medications, I mean, you're

1 going to see a bigger shift in that.

2 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: We had testimony
3 last week from people who said that one of the 4 symptoms of their illness was that when they were 5 medicated, they didn't feel they needed their 6 medicine. So the people decompensate, they're 7 committed, they're medicated, they're well, and then 8 treatment goes out the window. It becomes a 9 repetitive cycle, 5, 10, 15 times. It drives
10 families and the victims like Mrs. Meckley crazy 11 because they see it coming. They know it's going to 12 happen. And there ought to be something in the law 13 for a judge and psychiatrist to take that into 14 account.

15 MR. VORON: Yeah, but even if you have 16 a commitment law in place, you are going to have to 17 get someone to a facility on a daily basis to get 18 their medications, or get a mobile psych nurse to 19 their house to take their medications.

20 How are you going to monitor the 21 medications? That's going to be a big job right 22 there by itself. That's going to be a big deal 23 right there to do that. That's going to be an 24 awesome thing to undertake right there. Good luck.

25 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Ms. Mendlow.

1 MS. MENDLOW: Mr. Voron, thank you
2 very, very much for your testimony. One thing that 3 struck me was how you identify one of the problems
4 in the system, the relationship with the doctors, 5 that you felt that the biggest stumbling block was 6 not having access in your treatment to a doctor who 7 you could share the side effects of your medication, 8 and your frustration then led to your having to try 9 to manage your own meds, etc.

10 MR. VORON: Right.

11 MS. MENDLOW: I was just wondering,
12 isn't there in the mental health system anything 13 like some kind of an advocate, like a special parent 14 advocate who can sometimes -- who can sometimes 15 intercede that go through, like, discussions of 16 treatment plans? And the reason why I'm asking is 17 -- even with Ms. Meckley's case, is there some 18 mechanism in the system of some kind of advocate to 19 kind of intercede between family/patient/doctor?

20 MR. VORON: There are patient
21 advocates out there. For about the first six to 22 eight years I was in the system, I really wasn't 23 afforded the ability to look at supports and 24 services that were out there.

25 I saw a doctor, a therapist. And I

1 didn't see a case manager or a nurse or an advocate.
2 I wasn't aware that these things were out there. I 3 kind of, like, fell in. I found these things on my 4 own after being in the system for about eight to ten 5 years. So there are patient advocates out there, 6 yes, there are.

7 MS. MENDLOW: Is that someone who is a
8 volunteer or someone who actually has an appointed 9 position?

10 MR. VORON: They are appointed to the 11 Mental Health Association, I know that.

12 MS. MENDLOW: Thank you.

13 MR. VORON: Sure.

14 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very 15 much, Mr. Voron. I appreciate your testimony today.

16 MR. VORON: Thank you.

17 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Next we have 18 Taylor Andrews, Esquire, the Chief Public Defender
19 of Cumberland County.

20 MR. ANDREWS: Thank you very much for 21 the opportunity to be here. I do want to vie for 22 the competition of who came the farthest. Just 24
23 hours ago, I was in Mexico City. I didn't come back 24 just for that purpose, but I think I'm in the 25 running, at least in the competition.

1 I apologize, I do not have a summary
2 of my written remarks, but I do have my remarks in 3 writing, and according to the instructions I was not 4 to just go through that. So I'm going to leave my 5 written statement to speak for itself.

6 As I have been listening to other
7 people testify, I have just been making some notes 8 of things that I might want to emphasize in my 9 comments. I'm disappointed that I wasn't here early 10 enough to hear all of Dr. Fisher, because I would 11 have liked to have heard all of his testimony, but 12 it was a bit of an adventure getting here this 13 morning.

14 What attracted me to this issue --
15 well, a number of things attracted me to the issue, 16 very personal matters, just as my good friend and 17 respected co-board member, Mr. Jevon, back here who 18 I have a lot of esteem for. I'm active with NAMI, 19 and usually what brings you to NAMI is an experience 20 with somebody in the family.

21 Also, as chief public defender in 22 Cumberland County -- and I've been chief public
23 defender since 1976 -- from that vantage point, I 24 have witnessed the criminalization effect of our 25 current public policies reflected in any number of

1 ways, whether it be restricted formularies, whether 2 it be funding shortfalls. One of the ways, in my 3 opinion, is the restricted nature of the commitment 4 standard in the Mental Health Procedures Act.

5 I've seen what this does. People talk
6 about liberties and I am a member, but I'm not here 7 speaking for them. I see a lot of my clients in 8 criminal court who are mental health consumers, 9 though they may not be in treatment, their liberty 10 is there in the county jail. And they're in the 11 county jail for months, and we're not talking just 12 one or two. It's become a trend. And it's a 13 recognized trend. It's been recognized by the 14 Department of Justice.

15 I heard a comment as I was coming in,
16 I think it was some of the questions and answers of 17 the good doctor, about mental health courts. And 18 that's a reflection of how to deal with the 19 criminalization process.

20 I think it's a terrible, terrible 21 thing that is going on now where individuals who are 22 not effectively responded to by our mental health 23 system are now going to be responded to by our 24 criminal justice system. We are creating protocols 25 and procedures for that to occur.

1 My understanding from the first mental 2 health court judge that existed down in Broward 3 County, Judge Wren -- and I heard her speech within 4 about a year or two after she had started that court 5 -- was that, yes, some diversion might occur.
6 That's really not the objective of that court. The 7 objective of that court is treatment. The objective 8 of that court -- it's clear what happens is since 9 there is no coercive power to Florida's counterpart
10 to our Mental Health Procedures Act, what they call 11 their Baker Act, the coercion comes out of the 12 criminal courts.

13 You get the individual into criminal 14 court and it will become a condition of -- whether 15 it's a condition of their ARD, which they will 16 eventually earn a dismissal of the charges, or it 17 will be a condition of their probation if they never 18 have to go to jail or to get out of jail on bail
19 before they are sentenced, or it might be a 20 condition of their parole after they serve a portion 21 of the time. But it's the power of the criminal 22 court that is going to be the coercion that people 23 are so concerned about. Now, I think that that's 24 unfortunate and regrettable, and we should look for 25 ways to alter our public policy so there is less of 1 a need to deal with mentally ill individuals in our 2 criminal courts who are essentially there because 3 they are mentally ill.

4 One of the things that I think has 5 been recently recognized -- and, chairman, you
6 commented on this in your question to Mr. Voron --
7 is the phenomenon which Xavier Amadore calls
8 anosognosia. It is -- I'll give you the spelling
9 afterwards. He wrote this book, I'm not sick, I 10 don't need help, where he was a research 11 psychologist, a Ph.D., at Columbia University and 12 has demonstrated that a high percentage of 13 individuals with very serious mental illnesses that 14 have psychosis as a feature have significant 15 impairment of their own illness, of their own
16 awareness of their own illness. It's not a matter 17 of pride. It's not a matter of just coping. It is 18 part of the illness. I don't think it's part of the 19 medication for the illness. It's part of the 20 illness.

21 That's what keeps a lot of people from 22 treatment. They are not individuals I suggest to 23 you who the Mental Health Consumer speaks for, 24 because these are individuals who would never 25 identify themselves as mental health consumers.

1 These are individuals that I'm representing in the 2 county jail, one of them right now for criminal 3 trespass at his mom and dad's house because they're 4 crazy and I'm crazy and everybody else is crazy.
5 And he doesn't need any medication.

6 What's his crime? He's at his mom and 7 dad's house. What institution is dealing with him?
8 Our county jail. He was not -- you cannot have a 9 successful intervention under our civil law for this 10 individual as our civil law is currently written.

11 There was a comment earlier about how 12 this bill could possibly empower individuals to 13 commit other individuals who are just eccentric. I 14 suggest to you it does that no more than our current 15 law. The way in which the proposed bill would 16 adjust the trigger for an involuntary commitment in 17 no way changes the definition of what is mental 18 illness. There still has to be a mental illness.
19 And that's no different under the law as changed by 20 this proposed bill than under the current law. So I 21 think that that's just not accurate.

22 One other point as to the -- my 23 understanding as to the importance for there to be 24 the ability for an effective intervention in a civil 25 setting, particularly for a first onset of a

1 psychotic break, is it is my understanding there is 2 research out of a doctor in North Carolina that 3 indicates the longer an individual remains psychotic
4 without a response, without an effort to restore 5 that individual to a nonpsychotic condition, the 6 less complete the restoration is going to be.

7 There can be permanent damage to an 8 individual who is in a psychotic state for an 9 extended period of time, because they have not yet 10 deteriorated to what we now define as a clear and 11 present danger, possibly because there is no overt 12 act, possibly because they are only damaging 13 property rather than assaulting people, possibly 14 just killing the family pets rather than acting out 15 against their siblings.

16 It's important that individuals not be 17 -- that there be an effective way to respond with 18 due process, with criteria that are clearly 19 established, so that there can be a response in 20 civil court to individuals when they become 21 psychotic.

22 I've read comments and I've heard 23 comments here about many things that could make the 24 treatment system better. I agree with most of them, 25 I will tell you. I mean, better formularies, better

1 supportive treatment, better funding, better peer 2 organizations and influences. I agree with all of 3 that. But it's somewhat off the point of what we're 4 about here, because none of that really affects that 5 population that is absolutely convinced they have no
6 mental illness. You can make services as complete 7 and whole and welcoming as you possibly can, but if 8 an individual thinks that's for you, mom and dad, 9 that's for you, neighbor, that's for you, Mr. Police 10 Officer, it's not going to make any difference.

11 I would point out that Dr. Fred Frese 12 was one of the founding board members of the 13 Treatment Advocacy Center in Arlington, Virginia, 14 which is an organization I worked for for two years, 15 whose mission it is to bring about reform similar to 16 the very same reform that's referenced in this House 17 bill that Dr. Fred Frese is on the board that is 18 pursuing that.

19 Here, again, my understanding in 20 Pennsylvania, unlike some other states, this whole 21 question of forced treatment, not a commitment to 22 where treatment might occur or might not occur but 23 forced treatment, that is what involves an 24 individual's right to refuse treatment, a right to 25 say, I'm not taking your gosh darn medication even

1 if they are forced into an inpatient facility really 2 isn't addressed in our current Mental Health
3 Procedures Act. It's not addressed by this bill 4 either.

5 There are some other states that 6 actually have an adjudication, and appoint like a 7 guardian to make treatment decisions where there is 8 a formal substituted judgment and empowerment of 9 another individual to make a treatment decision
10 where the consumer loses the ability to say, no, I 11 don't want that treatment.

12 Our current act does not have it and 13 this doesn't change it. What, as I understand it, 14 takes place in Pennsylvania aside from an emergency 15 situation where there is a very acute illness that 16 would have to be dealt with by emergency treatment, 17 it's negotiated.

18 Mr. Jevon talked about negotiations
19 with his son over cigarettes. I'll tell you there 20 are parents all over that come to support meetings 21 regularly, whether it be once every two weeks or 22 once a month, to prop each other up to be able to 23 coerce their kids that you can only stay home if you 24 take your medication. That's the only way this is 25 tolerable. If you want to be here, you have to take

1 medication. That's a form of coercion.

2 But it's also negotiated in the 3 treatment setting, because there is still a right to 4 refuse. What these proposed amendments do and why I 5 support them is they don't -- they change maybe some 6 of the cards that people are holding in that 7 negotiation. For instance, the very last change in 8 this proposed House bill that adds in the whole 9 array of circumstances that are to be taken into 10 account as to where treatment -- whatever treatment 11 is to be provided, where it is to be provided, that 12 medication compliance is added. That's increasing 13 the negotiating power of the treatment team as they 14 negotiate out what is going to be the form of this 15 treatment with that individual.

16 The new provision (1.1) that I think 17 is on the top of page 5 of the bill, I agree with 18 Mr. Schwoyer that this does not constitute forced 19 treatment or forced medication. It doesn't say that 20 at all. It does say that if you have a prescribed 21 medication and you stop taking your medication and 22 you start to deteriorate in such a way that it's 23 predictable that you are going to have serious 24 either physical or mental debilitation in the next 25 30 days, then that constitutes a clear and present

1 danger to yourself.

2 John, who just testified, indicated
3 how he was concerned that this bill would have 4 applied to him and made his situation so much worse,
5 because at one time he had adjusted his own
6 medication for the better for three years. This 7 never would have come into play for him. According 8 to his own statement, there was no deterioration
9 until sometime later. At such time that there is a 10 deterioration, there still would have to be -- there 11 is an objective standard there to determine. It 12 doesn't have to get to the point that you are acting 13 out with a threat of physical harm to somebody else 14 or a threat of self-destruction on yourself.

15 I support the bill. I think it would 16 make valuable adjustments to our current law. It's 17 the sort of adjustments that are being made in other 18 states. Sometimes we lose sight of what is 19 happening in other states in the way of legislation.
20 I believe Mr. Stanley may have given you testimony 21 last week. I'm not certain about that. I know they 22 keep a pretty active scorecard as to exactly what's 23 going on across the country.

24 This type of reform is occurring more 25 and more across the country, I think, upwards of 1 approximately a dozen states or so. They reformed

2 their commitment standard to include a basis other 3 than just the police power rationale.

4 I see this, the changes in this bill,
5 not so much to address the situation that Ms.
6 Meckley has given that testimony about -- she is in 7 a very, very difficult situation -- but I see it as 8 beneficial to the consumer. I see it as beneficial 9 to the loved ones of those of us that are in NAMI.

10 I want to make clear, just as Mr.
11 Jevon, I'm here in my own individual capacity 12 speaking. I, basically, think these changes would 13 be available.

14 I'll stop there and answer any 15 questions.

16 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you.

17 MR. ANDREWS: You're welcome.

18 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Any questions, 19 Don?

21 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Tom?

22 REPRESENTATIVE STEVENSON: No.

23 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I will ask a 24 couple while they think about it.

25 We heard from Dr. Fisher this morning

1 that there was a possibility or stances that he has 2 witnessed where family members have exploited the 3 system, the commitment system, for various reasons.
4 Do you think it would be beneficial to put into the 5 language of the act that the judge should look,
6 consider, whether or not there is an exploitative 7 reason for the proceeding, to make that a box to 8 check off in the judge's deliberation?

9 MR. ANDREWS: I guess I would see no
10 harm in doing that. I would expect that to be done
11 as a matter of course in Pennsylvania. I don't know 12 that all states are this way. An individual in a 13 commitment process is represented by counsel. It's 14 provided out either on a contract basis or the 15 public defender's office. Certainly, it would be 16 the job of the legal representative of the subject 17 of a legal proceeding to make exactly that kind of 18 an argument.

19 I will say at least in the NAMI
20 community locally, those aren't the concerns that we 21 hear. The concerns aren't that there's an excessive 22 amount of attempts to use the Mental Health 23 Procedures Act, it's just that it's too darn hard to 24 use effectively at all.

25 Our local mental health director in

1 credit responded, they certainly didn't forget the 2 prosecution. They took him to the local mental 3 health center and he was admitted to the local 4 mental health center for a short time and then sent 5 to the state hospital where he was for about six 6 months.

7 I had an opportunity -- I'm an 8 admissions officer for a NAMI chapter. Because of 9 wearing that hat and the public defender hat, I'm 10 able to reach out to the family and say, you don't 11 understand what's going on here.

12 There's a young fellow who responded 13 to treatment with new medication at the state
14 hospital, came out and I've heard of no problems 15 since. He is not compliant with the treatment and 16 is doing very, very well.

17 That's one example. We certainly have 18 other examples of individuals who we see regularly 19 over and over and over again. I can't give you any 20 standard on that. It is a very individual listing, 21 a very individual listing.

22 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: There were 23 comments from Dr. Fisher, and Mr. Jevon commented 24 that cruelty to animals is normally not a symptom of 25 serious mental illness. What is your perspective on 1 leaving that in or taking it out?

2 MR. ANDREWS: Well, you have to be
3 careful not to misread this bill. This doesn't say 4 if you are cruel to animals you are mentally ill.
5 You first have to be found to be severely mentally 6 disabled. And for that, there has to be a mental 7 illness found.

8 Then we're talking about what would 9 constitute clear and present danger. And killing 10 animals, not flushing duckies down the toilet but 11 that you are stringing up the house cats, for 12 somebody that's seriously mentally ill I think that 13 warrants to maybe have an examination.

14 Just anecdotally -- and I know it's 15 not a scientific study -- Russell West, the 16 individual that went into the Capitol, he killed the 17 family pets. It was like a dozen cats that he 18 killed. And they couldn't respond with a civil 19 commitment out in -- I forget whether he was from 20 Montana or one of the Dakotas.

21 If somebody is acting in such an 22 agitated state and they also have a mental illness, 23 I suggest when it's appropriate to look at it more 24 closely and look at it in more detail. The fact 25 that it's not a person that they might be acting out

1 at but property -- I mean, if somebody takes their 2 sledge hammer out and is bashing up their neighbor's 3 car, the fact that their neighbor is not in the car
4 currently, well, that's not a clear and present
5 danger to another person. That's a criminal 6 mischief is what that is. So where you go, sir, is 7 you go to jail.

8 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I wanted to 9 support your point on the criminalization of the 10 mentally ill, the Treatment Advocacy Center. Some 11 of the statistics they gave last week showed that 12 serious mental illness occurs in about 1 percent of 13 the population at large but about 16 to 20 percent 14 in state and county inmates, for example.

15 MR. ANDREWS: That may be a little 16 much of an overstatement in my opinion. I mean, 17 schizophrenia is 1 percent; bipolar disorder is 18 somewhere between 1 and 2 percent. So if you put 19 the two together, you're probably around 2.5 or 3 20 percent.

21 The statistics from the Department of 22 Justice said 16 percent wasn't limited to just 23 schizophrenia and bipolar. So you end up with a 24 little bit of a comparison of apples and oranges.

25 I think when we're talking about the

1 commitment law, we really are talking about the law 2 that is going to be applied to an individual who is 3 significantly mentally ill. We're not talking about 4 mild depression. We're talking about somebody that 5 really is most frequently in a psychotic state and 6 can't be reasoned with into a voluntary treatment.

7 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Lastly, for me
8 anyway, do you get calls from the family members 9 that say, you know, my son, my daughter is off their 10 medication, they are starting to act out, what can I 11 do.

12 MR. ANDREWS: Absolutely.

13 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: What is your 14 experience with that in our current law?

15 MR. ANDREWS: Well, for several years
16 we recently had a police officer who was very 17 sensitive. And that was our best resource, because 18 that was an agency that would come out and come to a 19 home, and a police officer did have the arrest power 20 to take somebody in for an examination, but 21 invariably even if we could get the police officer 22 to respond, there would be frustration because the 23 commitment standard test would close the door.

24 We look for any leverage we can to do 25 the negotiation we referred to. I was surprised to

1 see but happy to see one of the testimonials you 2 have in writing is somebody from my local county and 3 it's somebody's situation I know quite well. And 4 it's just a terrible situation that the current law 5 cannot address.

6 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: They have to get 7 to such a point.

8 One last thing. You worked with many 9 judges on these issues in Cumberland County over the 10 years. How would you characterize the knowledge and 11 the treatment that the judiciary brings to these 12 cases?

13 MR. ANDREWS: Recognize I still 14 practice before these same judges and I see somebody 15 is taking down my remarks.

16 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Tell me
17 afterwards.

18 MR. ANDREWS: It varies. I will say
19 that with the NAMI Organization, we did judicial 20 training at the trial judges' conference about four 21 or five years ago with a Dr. Roger Haskett from 22 right here in Pittsburgh. And it was clear to me 23 that the judges had a thirst for the information.
24 Their reaction to the three-hour training that we 25 brought them, that was some very practical

1 information about individuals with specific serious
2 mental illnesses and how they might manifest 3 themselves and how that might affect decisions that 4 judges would have to make in custody cases or in 5 criminal cases or in other cases. And we got very, 6 very positive evaluations for the need for that kind 7 of thing.

8 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Any other
9 questions?

10 MR. SCHWOYER: I'm curious. Can you
11 tell the committee what sort of things are out 12 there, are going on out there, in the real world in 13 the area of forensics and mental health? Is it an 14 issue? Are people thinking about it, concerned 15 about it, working on it, talking about it?

16 MR. ANDREWS: I have been involved in 17 several conferences and planning groups for 18 conferences, and everybody is looking for best 19 programs, model programs, and their model programs.
20 They are working on a mental health court right now 21 in Allegheny County that I think is modeled, if not 22 directly, indirectly after the court that started in 23 Broward County.

24 There are crisis intervention teams
25 now in more than a dozen cities across the country

1 that are modeled after the Memphis crisis
2 intervention teams that were started, where a cadre 3 of police officer with specialized training to 4 respond in a sensitive and appropriate fashion to an 5 individual with a mental disturbance for whom the 6 police are called with a single point of entry for 7 an evaluation in the mental health system, so that 8 the police officer can drop them off and go back on 9 the street and somebody else is going to make a 10 determination of what's appropriate.

11 There was a PACT observation made here 12 how if somebody doesn't want to take their 13 medication, well, how are they going to take their 14 medication, are you going to send a psych nurse to 15 everybody's house?

16 Well, PACT, that's Program for 17 Assertive Community Treatment, that is a program 18 that originally came out of Madison, Wisconsin.
19 There is a PACT program now getting started in Bucks
20 County, Pennsylvania as a model. I understand 21 there is a program similar to PACT with a different 22 name already in Allegheny County.

23 So there are many, many different 24 programs trying to address these problems, many of 25 them in the context of the criminal courts, if

1 that's specifically what you're asking about.

2 MR. SCHWOYER: Would the changes in 3 House Bill 2374 be consistent with those concepts, 4 or would it hinder what's going on or help, or what 5 do you think?

6 MR. ANDREWS: In my opinion, it would 7 make it less necessary to have if you have an 8 effective civil intervention court. A significant 9 number of individuals who are now hitting our county
10 jails would not hit the county jails. So you 11 wouldn't have to have the programs built into our 12 criminal justice system to try and extricate people 13 out.

14 And we also wouldn't double stigmatize 15 people not only with a label of mental illness, but 16 also a criminal conviction or at least a criminal 17 prosecution.

18 MR. SCHWOYER: In the course of your 19 involvement with this issue, have you in recent 20 times had an opportunity to look at the cost of 21 mental illness to the criminal justice system, 22 whether it be time or whether it be cost of 23 medications?

24 MR. ANDREWS: I know our county and I
25 think I have been to enough meetings where most

1 County Prison Boards, one of their budgetary 2 problems is the cost of psychotropic medications.

3 MR. SCHWOYER: Right.

4 MR. ANDREWS: My reaction is, well, 5 no, you need to have those medications, maybe even 6 spend a little bit more to get the better 7 medications that the doctor was talking about.

8 The Ohio Department of Corrections, I
9 think, has learned that there is a benefit to use 10 the A-typicals in the state correction system. I'm 11 not sure that we're there yet in Pennsylvania.

12 I don't have any specific cost benefit 13 analysis. I know that there are very real costs to 14 the criminalization process, dollar costs, and more 15 than that there's just the cost of human suffering 16 from people being prosecuted.

17 I've talked to the people here trying 18 to extricate out. I did make reference in my 19 comments. Sometimes you just have terrible 20 situations. Mr. Jevon referenced two folks here in 21 Allegheny County. Sometimes there are just 22 horrendous circumstances. It is infrequent. I do 23 like to dispel the notion that folks with mental 24 illness are significantly more violent. They are 25 not any more violent at all than the general public

1 if there is treatment compliance.

2 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you.

3 MR. ANDREWS: There is another study
4 on coercion. And I just read notes of it as it was 5 in process. Basically, it was surveying consumers 6 as to just how did they react to the process that 7 had them in treatment. And as I understand the 8 results of that study, it wasn't -- they didn't 9 react to whether the initiating event into treatment 10 was an involuntary commitment or a voluntary 11 commitment. What they reacted to was whether their 12 dignity was respected and whether they were treated 13 with respect.

14 MR. SCHWOYER: Right.

15 MR. ANDREWS: And even individuals who 16 were committed involuntarily, if they were treated 17 in a dignified fashion, treated with respect as very 18 important individuals, the sense that the study on 19 coercion, as I understand it, was the feeling 20 afterwards wasn't any more negative. Actually, it 21 was less negative than if they were voluntarily 22 admitted and treated poorly by the people that they 23 encountered.

24 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you.

25 MR. ANDREWS: You're welcome.

1 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Ms. Mendlow.

2 MS. MENDLOW: Hi, Mr. Andrews.

3 MR. ANDREWS: Hello.

4 MS. MENDLOW: We have heard from the 5 Psychiatric Society, and I guess what I was looking 6 for is in your experiences in dealing with 7 psychiatrists in your work, because it seems like 8 the position that the Psychiatric Society is taking 9 at least is one of great fear and apprehension about 10 any kind of expansion to the criteria for 11 involuntary commitment. And yet we hear about the 12 problems in getting any kind of treatment, voluntary 13 or involuntary.

14 I'm just kind of confused. I'm 15 wondering -- it's been a couple years back -- we 16 were hearing a little different tune. They seemed 17 to be much more concerned from the psychiatric 18 community about the access to the treatment issue in 19 our state. I was just wondering if you have any 20 insights as to what may have occurred, why they are 21 not perhaps, I would say, coming up with more 22 aggressive kinds of assistance for patients?

23 MR. ANDREWS: I really don't have any 24 insights. I do believe that the point of view of 25 the psychiatric community would be extremely

1 important. I mean, they are an extremely important
2 player in the whole process of mental health
3 treatment.

4 MS. MENDLOW: Right.

5 MR. ANDREWS: As I understood it, the 6 American Psychiatric Association has their own model 7 law, I believe, or principles for a model law that 8 do recognize need for treatment, which this would 9 fall into that category as a legitimate rationale
10 for involuntary treatment. But as to exactly why 11 the Pennsylvania Psychiatric Society or Association 12 would take the position they have, I have to let 13 them speak for themselves.

14 My sense somewhat from listening to 15 what I did hear from Dr. Fisher was that some of it 16 was almost prejudging the constitutionality of a 17 change, that since this would no longer be based on 18 dangerousness, it is suspect, that it would be 19 unconstitutional, and I think that that's not the 20 case. You can have a rationale other than just 21 based upon the police power. It can be based on the 22 power of the state to look after the welfare of the 23 citizens.

24 I go there reluctantly myself as 25 somebody that knows that government power is

1 something that has to be pretty well regulated and 2 controlled.

3 MS. MENDLOW: Thank you.

4 MR. ANDREWS: Thank you.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Someone from the 6 audience wants to say something.

7 MS. PETIBONE: I'm from Pittsburgh.

8 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: What's your name?

9 MS. PETIBONE: I want to make a few 10 comments.

11 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Ma'am, what's your 12 name?

13 MS. PETIBONE: I'm Mary Ann Petibone.
14 I'm the Executive Director of the Pittsburgh
15 Psychiatric Society. I work with Dr. Fisher and Dr.
16 Haskett. We actually represent 400 psychiatrists
17 here in Pittsburgh.

18 We met last evening to discuss parts
19 of this bill and some of the testimony that Dr.
20 Fisher would present this morning. And one of the 21 issues that you raised was, why are the 22 psychiatrists actually opposing some of this 23 legislation.

24 I think the real concern there was the 25 fact that once a person is thrown into the criminal

1 justice mental health system with a 302, they are 2 actually labeled for life, so to speak. It could 3 affect their future in many different ways from the 4 means of access to health care, job opportunities, 5 graduate schools. There are a huge number of 6 factors that would be taken into account and affect 7 that person's life from the very beginning.

8 So I think the idea with the 9 psychiatric community is the fact that they don't 10 want to force people into a situation, but rather 11 they want to open the access to mental health care 12 in other ways.

13 I'm sorry. I have to refer to my 14 notes. Mr. Voron spoke about the fact that you 15 cannot go into an emergency room and seek treatment, 16 that you are turned away. That's a huge problem. A 17 lot of these problems are a series of problems that 18 if there is intervention early on, that it would 19 lead to -- it would resolve an issue that may turn 20 out to be a catastrophic event.

21 So I think the whole idea with the 22 psychiatric community, at least from what we were 23 discussing last evening and with Dr. Fisher's 24 testimony this morning, is the fact that you don't 25 want to see more of a rein put on a person, but you

1 want to open that field up and let them decide -- 2 like people go for physicals once a year for 3 physical health, there should be physicals once a 4 year for mental health. That could solve a whole 5 lot of problems. If everybody decided, I'm going to 6 go see a doctor once a year, then maybe that would 7 open up some areas for treatment, etc.

8 I don't know if I answered your 9 question or not. I just thought I had to say
10 something as I'm sitting here listening to you and I 11 know Dr. Fisher did have to leave. He had somewhere 12 else to go this morning.

13 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you.

14 MS. PETIBONE: Thank you.

15 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Any other
16 questions or comments?

17 If anyone in the audience or anyone
18 else in the whole Commonwealth would like to submit 19 some written testimony for the record, we'll keep 20 that open for a couple of weeks to enable you to do 21 that.

22 You would like to say something, sir?

23 MR. BARN: Yes.

24 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Come up here and 25 state your name for our stenographer.

1 MR. BARN: My name is John Barn,
2 B-a-r-n. I work for the Grapevine Center. And one 3 of the problems I see here is that no one seems to 4 believe that a person could ever recover on their 5 own. And if you label somebody as having needed 6 medicine, you are going to create that for all their 7 life with this legislation.

8 Is that what this is about?

9 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Not at all.

10 MR. BARN: Okay. All right. But 11 another thing is when you go -- when you go in front 12 of a psychiatrist, let's say, or a mental health 13 board, all right, and they consider your faith, your 14 faith in Christ, all right, and they generally end 15 up counting that against you, you know.

16 Well, I was thinking, like, you know,
17 okay, like, if Noah were here and he were building a 18 boat, you know, in his backyard, I mean, everybody 19 else in the world would think that he was in error.
20 Who would be the one in error? All right. That's 21 one thing I would like to say.

22 The other thing was that, like, if you 23 were -- if you were -- man was given the choice to 24 eat off a tree of knowledge or good and evil and God 25 didn't stop him, okay, but that's a free choice he

1 had. All right. And ever since then, a human being 2 has been given the choice to make a wrong -- the 3 right to make a wrong decision and take the 4 consequences for that. Okay. All right. Okay.

5 I fear that within the mental health
6 system that we don't have -- I mean, you're not 7 given the right either to make your own wrong 8 decision about what you want to put in anymore or to 9 take the sequences for it because they'll -- it's 10 not guilty by reason of insanity. To me that's -- 11 both of those are insane propositions.

12 Okay. All right. So then later on in 13 the church, Paul said, don't let anybody judge you 14 for what you do and you don't eat, you know. It's 15 then -- the choices of medication that you put into 16 your body is actually a spiritual -- you know, is an 17 issue that we are not allowed to let anyone judge us 18 for, but within the mental health system they do 19 judge you as, you know, you haven't taken your 20 medicine so that -- so now you are less of a person 21 and what you say doesn't mean anything anymore.
22 It's like, you know, understand what I'm saying?

23 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I sure do.

24 MR. BARN: Yeah.

25 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: If it were an easy

1 problem, we would have solved it already.

2 MR. BARN: Well, here's another thing,
3 all right. Some people are in the middle of a 4 spiritual crisis sometimes. And, let's say, if 5 today you learned that you were lost and you were on 6 your way to hell and you didn't know your way out, 7 you might try a whole lot of funny things to try to 8 get to heaven, all right.

10 much.

11 MR. BARN: And they might not make a 12 whole lot of sense, all right. But it's a thing you 13 have to work out with God, you know. And for 14 somebody like a doctor and a panel of doctors to say 15 that, you know, this is a symptom, we have to get it 16 out of you, when you are trying to resolve a 17 spiritual crisis.

18 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Right.

19 MR. BARN: I know for a while there I
20 thought I committed the cardinal sin. I had to work
21 that out, you know. And when a -- and that was a 22 terrifying part of my life, all right.

23 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Right.

24 MR. BARN: When I would -- when you
25 would go -- you know, a doctor couldn't understand

1 that, you know. And he would think that's -- you're 2 trying to get -- you're trying to -- you know, he's 3 trying to take away from you and correct something a 4 little bit before maybe it's time.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Okay.

6 MR. BARN: That's kind of what I fear
7 in some sense. And then -- but there's one other 8 thing.

9 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Sure.

10 MR. BARN: I think -- I know an awful
11 lot of people that -- I work in -- I work at a 12 drop-in center. I meet a lot of people both treated 13 and untreated who in the course of their illness 14 have never committed an act of violence, all right.
15 And so that -- you know, they may have done odd 16 things but they never stalked people, killed people, 17 you know, went to try to rape people, you know, 18 whatever, you know, choked people.

19 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Right.

20 MR. BARN: And maybe they might have 21 gotten in trouble with the law, you know, in a 22 sense, you know, in the sense of a misdemeanor, you
23 know, but, you know, a misdemeanor. So I think you 24 better take into account -- make a division between 25 those who can -- who can -- who are not guilty of a

1 criminal act versus those that are guilty of 2 something that is criminal.

3 And for me, I don't -- I would not --
4 if I ever committed a crime, whether I was mentally 5 ill or not, I would still want to go to jail because 6 that would be the responsible thing to do as a human 7 being. That's what makes human beings human. We 8 can make -- but do you understand what I'm saying?

9 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I think I do. We 10 don't want to infringe on a person's spiritual 11 journey.

12 MR. BARN: Uh-huh.

13 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Until they reach
14 the point of being a danger to themselves or others.

15 MR. BARN: No. No.

16 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Once that line is 17 crossed is when we are looking at intervening.

18 MR. BARN: Okay.

19 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: People that are 20 eccentric.

21 MR. BARN: But as far as danger goes,
22 I think -- as least as far as the Bible, what I
23 believe in is we all have an old sin nature and evil
24 inside that we have to keep bottled up. All right.
25 Okay. It's our responsibility to manage it. All

1 right. Okay. Okay. And if we can successfully -- 2 if we have proven ourself to successfully manage 3 whatever is inside, let us free. All right. That's 4 what I'm saying.

5 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Thank you very
6 much, Mr. Barn.

7 MR. BARN: Set us free.

8 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: Mr. Jevon, one
9 last comment.

10 MR. JEVON: Just a response to Mr.
11 Schwoyer's question. I drop my objection to 12 (2)(1.1) with dropping off the last portion. I 13 would drop my opposition.

14 MR. SCHWOYER: Thank you.

15 MR. JEVON: Thank you.

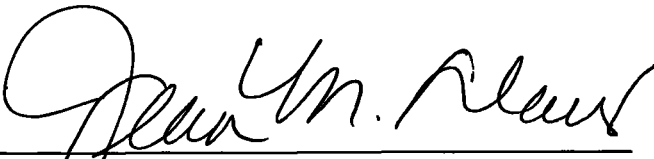

16 CHAIRMAN MAITLAND: I thank everyone
17 for your attendance. I think the turnout here was 18 very good today. I appreciate all the testimony, 19 verbal and in writing. Like I said, for a couple 20 weeks, we will take further testimony in writing if 21 anyone is interested.

22 With that, we will call this meeting
23 of the House Judiciary Task Force on Forensic Law 24 adjourned.
